Crops, milk, vegetables harmed by drought

Continued dry weather is Continued dry weather is affecting crops, grass and milk in many parts of England, with some of the Midland counties suffering most. The National Farmers' Union reported yesterday that there were failures and among spring cereal crops and beer, with ruined sugar beer and thin crops of grass for hay and silage in all 11 councies of its Midland region. It was believed to be the region's worst drought for 50 years.

Drought and cold have also affected vegetable growers, with the result that supplies of brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, peas and beans are likely to be smaller than usual. Other brassicas ler than usual. Other brassicas and runner beans are affected in the Vale of Evesham, and the fruit crop there is suffering. The high cost of bought feed has led to many dairy farmers relying more than usually on grass. Because of low prices, stock that might have been sold has been loosed. has been kept on the farm grazing. That in turn has reduced the area available for hav and

The shortage of grass is affecting milk yields. This month's production is expected to be at Outsider wins Derby: A crowd of more than 250,000 gathered in bright sunshine yesterday to watch a 50-1 outsider win the most valuable Derby ever run (Christopher Walker writes). Bookmakers made their largest profits in recent years when Snow Knight, jointly owned by Mr and Mrs Neil Phillips, crossed the finishing line.

Throughout the day strict security measures were in operation as armed policemen mingled with the crowd. More than 300 were on duty and a belicopter kept watch overhead, Stands and public enclosures were searched Surrounded in the unsaddling enclosure by journalists and red-faced tipsters, Mr Phillips, a Canadian tax lawyer, said: "I want to make it clear that I am a very conventional and a very happy man. This is only one of two corses that I have ever owned, and when it was bought it cost me about 55,500." He won £89,229 in prize money and in addition had a £100 each way bet on Snow Knight at odds of 66-1. Phillips, who arrived from Montreal on Monday, is uncertain about the suture of his horse, which at stud is now valued at more than 11m. The second horse, Imperial Prince, was also an outsider, at 20-1, and the third, Giacometti, was priced at 5-2.

Before the race, the Queen, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, Princess Alexandra and Mr Angus Ogilvy, drove down the course waving to the crowd. Later the royal group walked slowly to the paddock to inspect the rungers.

French Premier says Britain's demands a threat to EEC

From Richard Wigg Paris, June 5

M Jacques Chir., the new French Prime Minister, declared flatly today that the British demands for renegociation of the terms of membership do not appear reconcilable with the fundamental objectives of the Buropean Community, any more than with the legitimate interests of the eight other partners '

Presenting the new Government's programme to an uncer-tain National Assembly, and therefore in search of support M Chirac took an apparently tough negotiating line. He did so only one day after Mr Callaghan the Foreign Secretary, obtained agreement in Luxenboarg to instruct the European Commission to report on economic developments in the EEC and forecast the future.

Britain was asking, the French Prime Minister said, that "arrangements" should now be made in the EEC treaty, which it had signed and ratified one year ago, which "would put in doubt the equilibrium of the agreement concluded".

M Chirac, who gave an important place to European affairs in his statement, also highlighted France's need, for its economic development, to have "close links" with the United States, the world's leading economic power. Evidently to satisfy the Gaullists, who must still deliver the bulk of the new Government's votes when the debate ends tomorrow, M Chirac also insisted that close and friendly cooperation with the Americans could only be on the basis of "strict equality".

The new French Government, he went on regarded the con-struction of Europe with France's partners as the necessary condition for real pros-perity and for world power status. To renounce the con-struction of Europe would thus be to renounce what was essen tial for France itself.

Then M Chirac listed the main causes of the worrying state of Europe today, passing by way of the financial troubles obstructing monetary union and the Italian and Danish trade restriction measures to Britain's enegotiation demand.

On all the essential points, the Prime Minister said, French policy would have to show the greatest firmness and he promised the Government would do that

M Chirac, who was Minister of Agriculture under President common agricultural policy, to which the European economy owed an important part of its equilibrium, as something "un-touchable".

He conceded that he was peaking "frankly" about speaking "frankly" about Britain's renegotiation request, but added that, although it was not for France to judge this, it did not seem to Frenchmen in accordance with the British people's interests that they should separate themselves again from Europe "where they have been received warmth and friendship." M Chirac expressed optimism, however, about the Community's future based, he said, on the determination of the peoples themselves not to let governments binder the construction of that Europe whose benefits they had experienced. He confirmed President Gis-

the end of the decade and to take initiatives on essential topics like energy, regional and social policy, transport, and the environment, "For the Europe in crisis of today, France ought to have the vocation to bring to birth the united Europe of tomorrow", M Chirac deciared amid to achieve European union by appliause.

In a revealing passage, he remarked that relations between states must necessarily take account of the relations of force.

" On that subject ", he went on, "realism is indispensable." Gaullist hearts by saying that the first principle of French foreign policy must also be national independence. France must assure its own national security, including its nuclear deterrent force, he said. The Prime Minister, who quickly ran into spirited criticism from the Opposition benches, was not sule to announce the precise anti-inflation-ary measures that the Government promised to have ready by next Wednesday.

New attack on Concorde and Maplin projects

By Our Business News Staff The last government's commitment to building a third London airport at Maplin brings into question the machinery of deci-sion-making for large projects, according to a new pamphlet published today by the Institute of Economic Affairs. In his contribution, Professor J. B. Beath, of the London Business School, points out that Maplin is not the only long-term, large-scale project involving public funds which has turned out to be disastrously wrong. Others have been nuclear energy, telephone exchange equipment and the Concorde.

The argument of all the contributors, who include Professor Ffows Williams, Rank Professor of Engineering (Acoustics), Cambridge University, and Sir Peter Masefield, a former chairman of the British Airports Authority, is that the political process is inadequate for the schemes and that large sums of money may be wasted. The work of the Roskill commission is also questioned. The pamphlet says the com-mission started with the insecure assumption that a third airport was required and therefore concentrated on an appraisal of different sites. It should have examined the assumption itself.

First report points to pipe break as cause of Flixborough blast

Evidence has been found of a break in a main pipeline at the Nypro chemical plant at Flixborough, Humberside, where 28 people died in an explosion on Saturday.

That was stated by the Department of Employment yesterday in giving details of a preliminary report to the Chief Inspector of Factories by the investigation reason was line of the chief Inspection of Factories by the investigation reason was line of the chief Inspection of Factories by the investigation reason was line. investigation team working at

The department says there is evidence of a break in one of the major pipelines recently installed, between vessels in the plant where cyclohexane is oxidized to produce cyclohexanone. The department continued: "This plant operates under pressure and at high temperatures, and any major failure would probably result in the escape of considerable quanti-ties of highly flammable vapours. Such a sequence of events appears to be confirmed by the statements of those wit-nesses so far interviewed.".

The investigating team will continue to make reports to the formation it gathers will be put before a public inquiry. Meanwhile, senior staff of the Factories Inspectorate are talking with the chemical industry and individual important firms to consider what action should firms be taken in the light of the inquiry's first findings.

Good safety record: Over the past three years 27 people have been killed in the chemical industry excluding the Flixbor-ough disaster, the British Chemical Industry Safety Council disclosed yesterday. In a statement on Saturday's explosion the council, which is composed of representatives of member firms of the Chemical Industries Association, said that as far as was known there had been no deaths among the public near chemical works as a result of those incidents.

So far, the council said, the chemical industry had a better safety record than British in-dustry in general. The effort it devoted to safe plant design, building, operation and mainte-nance was already very substantial and the industry recognized the need for continued effort and the updating of procedures to keep pace with technology. A leading article in the latest issue of the weekly engineering management journal, The Engineer, says chemical engineers and management "must swallow their pride in assuming they know best". It urges all concerned to show more respect in the Commons on Monday for chemical plants and the Mr Crosland, Secretary of State people who work in them and for the Environment, will be live near by.

Publisher denies |£1,000 fine on intent to pirate' book

Mr Alec Flegon, a London publisher, yesterday asserted his innocence of allegations that he intended to "pirate" the latest book by Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Proceedings for permanent orders to prevent Mr Flegon from infringing the rights of Mr Solzhenitsyn and his publishers in the book Gulag Archipelago, were adjourned for three weeks. "I am completely innocent and have the right to defend the case", Mr Flegon said. He trades as Flegon Press in Greek Street, Soho.

Mr Justice Foster was told that Mr F1. Jon had prepared his own draft defence to the action eing brought against him by the author and his London Paris and New York publishers.

The judge indicated that if, in three weeks time, no defence had been filed, he would consider whether a prima facie defence had been shown.

Even chance of sisters ending fast, peer says

By Christopher Sweeney A new attempt to bring about an end to the hunger strike by the Price sisters was undertaken yesterday by Lord Brockway, the Labour peer. After visiting Dolours and Marian Price in Brixton prison, Lord Brockway twice had discussions with Mr Jenkins, Home Secretary, at the Home Office. He is going to Brixton again today apparently to pass on information from Mr Jenkins.

Speaking after his second visit to the Home Office yesterday Lord Brockway said there was an even chance of the hunger strike ending. He said he now had greater hopes that a solution could be found, although that depended on the attitude taken by the IRA, and the sisters them-

The advantages of arriving in a Mercedes:

Before we look at any of the other advantages, the first fact is you've a better chance of arriving at all.

Union

new of

Because one thing all the experts will agree is that Mercedes Benz are just about the safest cars on the roads today

As the Guardian motoring correspondent put it: Any valuable executives involved in a car crash in the 'S class have a better chance of walking away from the wreckage than in any other luxury saloon in Europe today.

Even so you're probably not going to buy a Mercedes for safety alone.

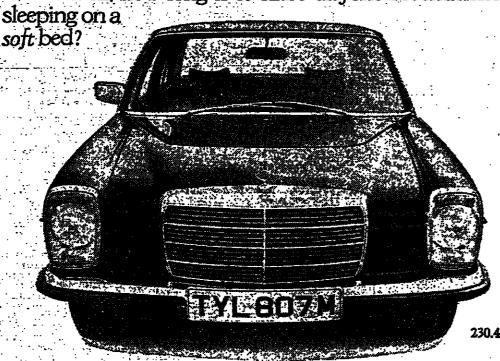

So what else have we to offer?

You arrive in comfort.

Obviously there are a lot of things we could say about comfort in a Mercedes-Benz.

But let's just take the seats as an example. Because a lot of people's first reaction to them is they're hard.

Well, how long is it since anyone recommended

Mercedes-Benz seats are firm, in fact orthopaedically designed, to give your body the support it needs.

So that even after a 300 mile journey you're still ready for more.

So that even after a London jam you'll still be able to find your feet.

As the Times correspondent, recently traffic bound for 2½ hours, simply said:

It was a tribute to the comfort of the 230.4 that the ordeal was not as frustrating as it might have been.

You arrive on time.

Let's be quite honest, on today's crowded and restricted roads, a tremendously high top speed is no longer what's needed.

What you need now is a car with a flexible performance—the kind that s just as happy on the North Circular as it is cruising up the Ml.

The kind that won't let you down in the wet.

Won't swerve you out of line when you brake. Won't hesitate when you put your foot down to accelerate.

Or as Car recently said of the 280E, makes it impossible to induce a situation where the car behaves unpredictably, regardless of surface or speed.

With the result that you can almost unintentionally put in very high average speeds.

And when you think about it, isn't that, today, what you really want?

You arrive feeling fit for business.

You know how it is when you have to drive anywhere to keep an appointment:

A slog up the motorway is never going to help your pitch for that multi-million pound contract.

A battle through the city will hardly help towards a relaxed new business presentation.

So it's perhaps as well to know that everything in a Mercedes-Benz is designed to prevent you feeling tense,

In short, to make driving as effortless as it can be.
And who knows, maybe even relaxed enough for you to solve a few of your company's problems on the way.

You arrive with a subject of conversation.

Naturally levels of interest in the car will vary.

The more technically-minded might like to hear about your 450's starting torque compensation, for instance. (Under heavy acceleration it actually prevents rear end squat.)

But more than likely they'll simply be interested in the washers and wipers you've got on your SLC's headlights.

Or your standard central locking system. (Watch as you turn that key. They'll all want to know if all the doors, the boot and petrol cap really have locked at once)

Whatever everyone chooses to talk about, though, one thing's for certain-they will talk.

And whenever people do that, you can always be sure of one other thing too:

Everyone knows you've arrived.

The organizations want the Bill to give local authorities power to requisition empty property similar to the power used in wartime. The 1971 cen-sus showed that 700,000 homes in Britain were empty and surveys in London areas indicate that the number in the capital

Minister's assurance on police data banks

Science Correspondent

Public anxiety about invasion of privacy from the establish-ment of large computer data banks by the Government for police forces was referred to by Lord Harris, Minister of State, Home Office, at the Communications 74 Conference at Brighton yesterday.

He said the Home Office was giving a demonstration at the conference of the use of these systems by police forces. The data available gave the man on the beat in seconds information that would otherwise take hours or days to obtain. That was possible because the Home Office had installed the largest system of information retrieval in Europe for police records. From an enormous central file, the policeman could obtain details about suspected criminals, stolen cars and other aspects of

The first of the information banks became available in April for checking on stolen cars. Lord Harris added that in 1972 more than 800,000 stolen car records were on file.

Mr. Lennon was acquitted and discharged. Mr O'Brien was found guilty of both charges and sent to prison.

The fact that Mr Lennon was a police informer was never mentioned to the jury, counsel said. No doubt he would have altered his line of defence had he possessed that information at the trial.

Mr Blem-Cooper said that be-fore his death Mr Lennon had made a long statement to the National Council for Civil Liberties in which he described how he became a Special Branch in-former. Counsel added: "It is not suggested, and there is no single piece of evidence to suggest, that Mr Lennon was an agent provocateur."

The trial court was misled by the manner in which the Crown conducted its case.

Lord Widgery, the Lord Chief Justice, quashing both convic-tion and sentence and awarding Mr O'Brien costs out of public funds, said: "If the jury acquitted Mr Lennon, Mr. O'Brien could not be convicted. unless it could be established that other persons were in-volved. Howell warning about emphasis on conservation By John Young

Mr Howell, Minister of State (Sport) at the Department of the Environment, yesterday urged those concerned with en-vironmental protection not to place excessive emphasis on the conservation of beauty spots and historic buildings.

"Although we often talk about the need to maintain the heritage of our country, we must never forget that hundreds of thousands of our citizens live in circumstances where the environment means hood", he said. Probably the greatest need today was to im-prove the quality of life in cities and conurbations.

He hoped that the environmental lobby would continue to grow, although its demands grow, although its demands often embarrassed the Government. In the present financial climate our resources were nothing like enough to satisfy those demands, but he was not asking the environmentalists to quell their voices.

Red roses for the D-Day dead forces. The frigate Undaunted

From Michael Horsnell Bayeux, Normandy, June 5

A wreath of red roses and carnations was cast into the Channel at dawn today, two miles off Arromanches, from the stern of the French steamer Villandry, and the many lives lost in the D-Day landing 30 years ago were commemorated.

Then the tiny party of pil-grims who had come to remem-ber returned to the ship's cafe-teria for the raffle draw, the piped music of Sid Lawrence playing Glenn Miller and the exhortations of General Eisen-hower to be of stout heart.

This particular "Longest Day", organized by L'Alliance Française, will not be the most formal of the many D-Day celebrations planned for this week. But then seven hours at sea followed. lowed by a gruelling tour of the beaches and bars demands an unmilitary response.

Captain Gilbert Heuze, a for-mer French Resistance fighter, who is both master of the Villandry and president of the Dieppe Committee of L'Alliance Francaise, had hoped for 800 D-Day veterans and their wives. Instead he got 250, partly because a huge party of Americans opted out because of the exchange rate. One of those who did come remembered a terrified 18-yearold private who was forced sud-denly to relieve himself in a cherry orchard and died when he accidentally triggered a grenade while dropping his trousers.

That memory will be fresher in the mind this time next year than today's visit. So too the memory of friends who began to drown the moment they stepped from the landing craft with 70lb packs on their backs. The French remember too.

Planned reforms in the legal education of people wishing to become lawyers have received a serious setback with the deci-sion by the Law Society not to go ahead with key training courses for prospective solicitors. The whole future of legal education now at stake.

The reforms, originally recommended by the Ormrod commit-tee in 1971, included abolition of tee in 1971, included abolition of the system of having to serve articles in a solicitor's office and its replacement by a law degree, or equivalent, followed by a year long vocational training course.

Israel-Syrian disengagement goes | Watergate's into effect today after detailed plan is signed in Geneva

From Our Correspondent Geneva, June 5

The first disengagement move-ments of Israel and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights start tomorrow under the detailed plan signed at the Palais des Nations here today by senior officers of the two armies. The operation is to be completed within 20 days.

Tomorrow morning aircraft of the International Committee of the Red Cross begin repatriating prisoners of war, 382 Arabs being exchanged for 56 Israelis.

Signing of the documents and maps, in the council chamber at the Palais, went with military precision, according to officials. It was in camera, as were the daily meetings that had been in when the disengagement agreement itself, as negotiated under the auspices of Dr Kissinger, the American Secretary of State, was signed.

The plan was signed by General Herzl Shafar of Israel, General Adnan Wahid Tayara of Syria, and, as witness, the chair-man, General Ensio Siilasvuo, commander of the United Nations emergency force and chairman as well at the Egyp-tian-Israel disengagement talks

There was, in addition, a statement by General Sillasvuo devoted to other matters and signed by him alone. Its con-tents were not revealed.

President Nixon's defence

lawyer, Mr James St Clair, was reported today as saying that he thought if "very doubtful, very doubtful" that the House judiciary committee would vote to recommend impeachment of Mr Nixon. The comment to reporters has made news because it goes against even publicized White House predictions—let alone the overwhelming feeling on Capitol Hill that the only remaining uncertainty in the affair is whether Mr Nixon will be convicted in the Senate. The process is for the judi-ciary committee, which is at present holding closed hearings on whether grounds for impeach-ment exist, to recommend its views to the full House. If impeachment were recommended, the House would then vote, a simple majority being suffi-cient to send the President for trial in the Senate.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF KOREA

Answers of the respected and beloved leader KIM IL SUNG to questions raised by "L'UNITA", organ of the Italian Communist Party.

Pyongyang, April 5 (KCNA).—Comrade Kim II the immediate dissolution of the "United ung, the great leader of our party and our people, Nations Commission for the Unification and Reave answers to questions raised by I'Unita, habilitation of Korea", a tool of U.S. imperialism Sung, the great leader of our party and our people, gave answers to questions raised by l'Unita, organ of the Italian communist party, on January tween the two parts of Korea on peacefully: reunifying the country free from interference of outside forces. But, later we learned that new difficulties had been laid on this road. Would you please tell us what those difficulties are and how they can be overcome? Answer: In 1972 a north-south joint statement whose keynote is the three principles of independeuce, peaceful reunification and great national unity, put forward by our party, was made public in our country as a result of the talks held between the north and the south. This was a big advance in the struggle of our people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the Eatherland. The records absorbed to the struggle of the independent and peaceful reunification of the Fatherland. The people throughout the world, to say nothing of the entire Korean people in the north and south, rejoiced and warmly hailed it.

After the announcement of the north-south joint statement we made every possible effort to put it into practice and achieve the reunification of the fatherland as early as possible, but in this effort we ran up against a big obstacle owing to the manoeuvres of the domestic and foreign splitters to perpetuate the national division.

The South Korean authorities under the wire pulling of U.S. imperialism scrapped the north-south joint statement on the day after signing it, saying that it is no more than a scrap of paper: which is unbelievable. After that they committed acts totally contravening the principles of the north south joint statement and turned down all the reasonable proposals put forward by us to accelerate national reunification. Then, in June 1987, they are the proposals appropriate the proposals. last year, they openly announced to the world a "policy" on fixing and perpetuating the national split. The assertion of the South Korean authoriries is that South Korea and North Korea s enter the United Nations separately. This is designed, to all practical intents, to freeze the division of the nation and keep our country divided into two parts forever.

The nation-splitting manoeuvres of the South Korean authorities are a product of the "Two Koreas" policy of U.S. imperialism. Having found it impossible to realise their wild design to invade the northern half of the Republic and turn the whole of Korea into their colony, the U.S. imperialists brought forward the "Two. Koreas" policy with a sinister aim to keep a hold on South Korea at least. At the United Nations General Assembly last year the U.S. imperialists, together with their followers, resorted to all sorts of tricks to push through a resolution on "Two Koreas". It is the Japanese militarists who are most zealously following the U.S. imperialists: in their "Two Koreas" plot. While stepping no their renewed invasion of South Korea, the Japanese militarists, in collusion and conspiracy with the U.S. imperialists, are actively pushing ahead with the plot to create "Two Koreas". It is not withour reason that some time ago a Japanese journal wrote that "the Two Koreas" policy is a drama the Pak Jung Hi regime is playing in accordance with the script of the United States and under its direction and under the stage-management of Japan ". We consider that a road to the solution of the question of our country's reunification can be smoothed only by smashing the "Two Koreas" plot of the U.S. imperialists, the Japanese militarists and the South Korean authorities and putting an end to the interference of outside. forces in the Korean question.

The Workers' Party of Korea and the Government of the Republic resolutely oppose any attempt to fix and perpetuate the division of our country and thoroughly reject any outside interference in the domestic affairs of our country.

Last year's United Nations General Assembly, the first one in history to be held with the attendance of the representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, checked the "Iwo Koreas," plot of U.S. imperialism and its lackers, expressed support to the three principles of national reunification laid down in the northsouth joint statement and adopted a decision on gan of the Italian communist party, on January for its interference in our internal affairs. This, 1974. is a welcome step which creates a favourable Question: One year ago we heard with great situation for the solution of the question of our prectation that an agreement was reached by tion an party's policy of independent and peaceful reunification.

The Workers' Party of Korea and the Govern

ent of the Republic will make every possible effort as ever to thoroughly smash any attempt to perpetuate the split of our nation and bring earlier the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

the fatherland.

We will actively struggle, first of all, to have the berets of "U.N. Forces" taken off the U.S. imperialist aggressor forces in South Korea, the main stumbling block to the solution of the question of Korea's reunification, and make them withdraw. At the same time, we will strive to continue the talks between the north and the south and bring about many sided collaboration. south and bring about many sided collaboration interchange between them in accordance with the principles clarified in the north-south

. In order to continue and develop the talks between the north and the south, the South Korean authorities must refrain from any acts contravenstatement. The South Korean authorities are still today persisting in the manoeuvres to perpetuate the national splir and the policy of dependence upon outside forces and harshly repressing the ocratic figures and patriotic student youth of the Korea who call for national reunification and democracy. Today such acts of the South Korean authorities constitute the chief obstacle to the talks between the north and the south.

If the South Korean authorities renounce their splittist stand, respect the north-south joint statement and make sincere efforts for its implementation, the north-south talks will make successful

If the South Korean authorities continue to ignore the north-south joint statement and follow the road opposite to it, the people will not tolerate them. The South Korean student youth and people, indignant at the South Korean authorities' ever more undisguised policy of fascist repression and manoeuvres to perpetuate the national split and their policy of dependence upon Japan, have risen in the anti-"government" and anti-fascist struggle for democracy. Already for several months they have been valiantly fighting under the slogans "down with the Pak regime", "establish democracy" and "put an immediate end to dependence upon Japan". It is natural that the South Korean student youth and people should struggle against those who betray the nation and repress the people by force, clinging nation and repress the people by force, clinging to the sleeves of the outside forces.

The just patriotic struggle of the South student youth and people will certainly Korean be crowned with victory and the cause of national reunification will be realized without fail by the united strength of the entire Korean people.

Question: You are living in the region where there were two protracted, sanguinary wars over the last 25 years and where imperialism suffered a heavy blow in face of the heroic struggle of the Korean people and the Vietnamese people. What is your view on the prospect of the situation in this region today when the Vietnamese people won a brilliant victory and new relations are being established on the international arena? Answer: Over the past period the struggle of the peoples against the imperialists aggression and intervention has been fiercer in Asia than in any other region and the imperialists have heen dealt a severe blow in this region.

The U.S. imperialists sustained a heavy defeat. politically and military, in the Korean war and started on the downgrade. Having been badly battered again in the Vietnam war, they are sinking deep into the pit of ruin. The U.S. imperialists are now being continually mauled in Cambodia. The U.S. imperialists are meeting setbacks and are repudiated everywhere in Asia.

All facts show that the situation in Asia has developed over the last period in favour of the Asian peoples and the U.S. imperialists have suffered a serious setback in Asia.

But the U.S. imperialists have not yet given their aggressive design against Asian countries. They are making desperate efforts to help themselves out of the predicament. The crafty U.S. imperialists put forth the so called "Nixon Doctrine" to make the Asians fight Asians by instigating their satellite states and puppers of Asia. Under the zealous aegis of the U.S. imperialists, the Japanese militarists are spurring on their infiltration into various countries of Asia to realize their wild ambition for overseas expansion

The aggressive design of the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese militarists against Asian countries will never be realized. I think the general situation in Asia will turn more favourable to the Asian peoples in the future.

There are many fighting and revolutionary countries in Asia. The revolutionary peoples of Asia are firmly united on one common front of struggle against the imperialists' aggression and intervention. The Asian peoples have been awakened and steeled through their protracted struggles against old and new colonialism.

The voices calling for independence are ringing louder and the fighting spirit is rapidly mounting against U.S. imperialism and Japanese militarism in all areas of Asia today. The last of the U.S. imperialists will be kicked out of Asia before long and the Japanese militarists' manoeuvres of operators agarages are hours.

long and the Japanese militarists' manoeuvres of overseas aggression are bound to be frustrated by the struggle of the Asian peoples.

Of course the U.S. imperialists may manoeuvre in Asia in various forms in future, resorting to a craftier trick. No matter how the U.S. imperialists may manoeuvre, however, the revolutionary peoples of Asia will firmly maintain the anti-imperialist stand to the end. The future of Asia will be decided by the Asian peoples, its master. The Asian peoples will certainly build an Asia where there is peither imperialism nor exploitation and oppression, an independent and tion and oppression, an independent and prosperous, new Asia.

Question: The workers' party of Korea holds a very dignified position in the International Communist Movement and has made an important contribution to the World Anti-Imperialist movement. Please tell us how do you view the prospect of the struggle against imperialism and for peace at the present stage in the light of your experi-ences, and what role the International Communist and working-class movements can play in this Answer: As you know, there is a growing argument on the international arena today that the present era is an era of shift to peaceful co-existence and cooperation from cold war and confrontation. Our people, too, want peace and unanimously hope to see a lasting peace. But.

unanimously hope to see a lasting peace. But, the Korean people are well aware that peace can never be achieved by begging the imperialists for it and it can be won only through a persistent struggle against imperialism.

The more difficult their position becomes the craftier double-dealing tactics the imperialists cling to. This is a habitual method employed by the imperialists whenever they find themselves in a difficult rostiton. in a difficult position.

The U.S. imperialists are now improving their relations with big countries and easing the tension temporarily under the signboard of "peace" in an attempt to gain a breathing space, while persisting in their intensified manoeuvres of aggression against small countries and interference in their internal affairs. Recently the U.S. imperialists instigated the Israeli aggressors to provoke a war of aggression against the Egyptian and Syrian peoples. The U.S. imperialists also engineered a fascist military coup to overthrow the legitimate popular unity government in Chile. It is also none other than the U.S. imperialists who are carrying on the manoeuvres of aggression and interference in the domestic affairs in Korea, Cambodia. Vietnam. Laos and a number of African countries and various other countries of the world. As the reality shows, the people want peace but the imperialists are always engrossed in aggression, war and intervention. We, therefore, consider that vigilance should be neightened and struggle intensified against the imperialists all the more when they put up the signboard of " peace". When the imperialists don the mask of peace", there may appear those who harbour an illusion about imperialism and shun struggle against it and also those who try to seek security through an unprincipled compromise with it. These people are either those who are tired of the revolutionary struggle and are going to give up revolution or cowards who are afraid of revolution. But the anti-imperialist struggle as a whole will not be weakened though these people may

As long as imperialism exists, there will always be exploitation and oppression, agression and intervention by it, and where there is imperialist exploitation and oppression, aggression and intervention there always breaks out the revolutionary struggle of the people against it. The people can free themselves from imperialist people can free themselves from imperialist exploitation and oppression and win independence and peace only through their own struggles.

There are still in the world many peoples subjected to imperialist oppression and exploitation. Therefore, the people who oppose imperialism and intend to make revolution will continue to increase in number in the future. The people of many countries now suffering from imperialist aggression and intervention calling for continued struggle and courageously rising up in the anti-imperialist struggle without wavering in the face of any bardships and trials.

No matter how hard the imperialists may try to paralyse the revolutionary consciousness of the people and stamp out the anti-imperialist struggle, putting up signboards of "peace", the anti-imperialist struggle of the people continue to grow in strength. The people will certainly win class liberation and national independence and attain world peace and security through their staunch struggle against imperialism.

As for the role of the International Communist and working-class movements in the anti-imperialist struggle, today the International Communist and working class movements constitute the most powerful revolutionary opposed to all the reactionary forces inc imperialism and the decisive force holding in check the imperialist policies of aggression and war and guaranteeing world peace and security is thanks to the strengthening of the International Communist and working-class movements that the general international situation is developing today in favour of peace and democracy, national independence and socialism. There is no doubt that if the International Communist and working-class movements advance as a united force in the future, they will play a far greater role than that they are playing today in the struggle against imperialism and for peace. We sincerely hope that all the revolution-ary forces will firmly unite and take a concerted step in the struggle against imperialism. imperialism in particular. Our party will in the future. too. as in the past, actively struggle for the unity of the International Communist move-ment and the solidarity of all the anti-imperialist

Question: In the past 20 years the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has brought about a great socio-economic upsurge in spite of the destruction wrought by the war. Please tell us about the future targets and prospects of

Answer: As you said, the economy of our country was severely damaged by the three-year war imposed upon us by the U.S. imperialists. After the war we started again to build the economy on the debris where nothing remained

Our people have not only rapidly healed the war wounds but also converted our country, once a backward colonial agrarian country, into a powerful socialist state with an independent and modern industry, developed agriculture, and brilliantly flowering and developing science and culture, in a historically short span of time by waging a heroic struggle under the correct leadership of the Workers' Party of Korea, Today the face of our country has so completely changed that one can hardly recognize what it was twenty years ago. Our people have great pride and self confidence in this.

But these are only initial successes. We have more work to do than we have done already. You asked about the targets of our struggle and prospects of development. To answer this, I would like to explain what is the central tasks of the six-year plan set forth by the Fifth Congress of our party and how these tasks are now being carried out.

The three major tasks of the technical revolution are the main content of the six-year plan. The three major tasks of the technical revolution set forth by our party aim to considerably narrow down the distinction between heavy and light labour, between agricultural and industrial work and free women from the heavy burden of household chores through an extensive technical renovation movement in industry and agriculture and all other branches of the national economy. We have already achieved big successes in the carrying out of the three major tasks of the technical revolution and opened a bright prospect for their successful fulfilment. We have made an epochal advance in the production of machine tools, the main link in the carrying out of the technical revolution. We have also laid the foundations of electronic and automation industries to realize semi and full-automation in all fields of the national economy.

Through vigorous endeavours to narrow down the distinction between heavy and light labour in the field of industry, the comprehensive mechanization of operations in the coal and ore mines and the automation of work in the metal and chemical plants have been realized in no small degree. In particular, an energetic drive is going on to go over to remote control step by step in those branches where there is heat-affected and harmful labour.

The technical revolution is also being dynamically pushed ahead to narrow down the distinction tween agricultural and industrial work and bring agricultural work close to industrial labour. This year is the tenth anniversary of the publication of "Theses on the Socialist Rural Question in our Country" on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the publication of the theses on the rural question, we are now working, setting ourselves the target to carry out the main tasks of the rural technical revolution put forth in the

In our country the irrigation of agriculture was realized long ago and the electrification was also admirably carried out in the countryside. Now a struggle is being waged forcefully to complete the mechanization and chemicalization of agriculture. We plan to supply the countryside with 70,000-80,000 tractors (in terms of 15 h.p. unit) by July this year, a task set forth in the theses. The task put forward in the theses to supply over one ton of chemical fertilizers per chongb terms of weight will be fulfilled in the first half of the year. The prospect of grain production is also very bright. A bumper harvest was reaped in our country last year. I think you know this well as you yourselves toured our countryside. We have set the fighting target to produce 6.5-7 million tons of grain this year while consolidating the successes achieved last year in the grain production. When this target is hit, it can be said, the grain height of the six-year plan will have been scaled.

The task of the technical revolution for freeing women from the heavy burden of household.

chores is also successfully progressing.

Great efforts are now being directed in our country to the development of the food and daily necessaries industries in order to create conditions for women to do cooking and other house-hold work quickly with ease. Along with this, work is making brisk headway to introduce water service in the countryside. When this project is completed, women will no longer need to carry water jars on their heads.

The living standard of our people will be markedly raised in the near future. Our people have now no worry about the question of food, clothing and housing. But the living standard of our people as a whole has not yet reached such a level as to satisfy them. There remain the differences between the workers and peasantry in their living standard and distinctions between urban and rural population in their living con-ditions. We are striving to raise by far the people's living standard as a whole and, at the same time, to improve it comparably.

When we work hard for a few years more after carrying out the six-year plan, our people's living will be improved by far not to be inferior to

In the future a big advance will be made also in public education and the training of national cadres. The universal compulsory ten-year senior middle school, education which started in 1972 will be enforced completely during the six-year plan to give all children complete General secondary education at state expense in the future they reach working age. Higher education will be rapidly developed and the number of technicians and specialists will exceed one million in the near future. In a word, the prospects of our country's development are very bright and our people's struggle is worthwhile, indeed,

Our working class and cooperative farmers are now waging a vigorous struggle to carry out the six-year plan ahead of schedule with a bright hope for the morrow.

In view of the fighting spirit of the working people, we are firmly confident that the six-year plan will be successfully carried out ahead of schedule When the six-year plan is fulfilled, the looks of our country will change all the more as whole and our people will reach a higher peak of socialism.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I would like to extend warm grangs to the Italian communists and the Italian working class for their active support to our people in the struggle for the building of socialism and for the realisation of the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and wish the Italian communist party greater success in the struggle against imperialism and for peace and democracy and

The Clockwork Testament or Enderby's End

By Anthony Burgess

(Hart-Davis, MacGibbon, £1.95) The plot of The Clockwork Testament or Enderby's End concerns the final activities, in New York, of the minor poet, F. X. Enderby, eponymous protagonist of Inside Mr Enderby and Enderby Outside. He is indirectly responsible for the film, The Wreck of the Deutschland. developed (by rewrite men) "out of an idea by F. X. Enderby" based on the story by G. M. Hopkins S. J. Real horrorshow sinny, as Alex, the hero of A Clockwork Orange would have said, transposed to Nazi times, incorporating " over-explicit scenes of nuns being violated by teenage storm-troopers" and advertised by a "gaudy poster showing a near-naked nun facing, with car-mined lips opening in orgasm, the rash-smart sloggering

Called to American attention by this demotic medium, Enderby has become Professor of Creative Writing at the University of Manhattan. He is occupied with a long poem about the conflict between St Augustine and Pelagius or Morgan, the British heretic, who believed that God had left man free to choose between Good and Evil. He is harassed by journalists, who are glee-fully perturbed about outbreaks of nunslaughter in Manhattan and Ashton-under-Lyme, and by teenage thugs whom he pinks with a swordstick in the sub-way. He is threatened by black power, women's lib, free verse, a female Christ. He has two mild heart attacks. And a final of the earlier book, intends to shoot him because her know-ledge of his work is restricting her freedom to compose. She announces herself as Dr Greav-ing from Goldengrove.

Enderby proclaimed in the first book that all women were stepmothers: rendered impotent, more or less, by terror of his own particularly gross one, he retreated into cloacal austerity and prolonged adoles cent fantasy, supported by her legacy to him, some shares and some repulsive dietary habits. But women are also bitch goddesses, white goddesses, moon goddesses and sun goddesses, with whom Enderby's relations are agonized, embarrassed and incomplete. He masters this last, Americano-Hopkins Muse,

Burgess returns, with his own mixture of crude gusto and verbal intricacy, to a concaten-ation of themes : the freedom of the will, the nature of Good and Evil (and their difference from right and wrong) the relation-ship between art and morals, the proposition that all life is one. In The Wanting Seed, a repel-lent and gripping fable of the future, he turned the debate between Pelagius and Augustine into a historical principle, the Cycle. Pelphase—belief in human perfectibility, liberal values, order. Interphase—disappointment, breeding repression. Gusphase—belief in original sin, human nature as destructive, use of war, sex and flesheating as social organizing forces, Pel-phase is rational, Gusphase religious and magical.

Burgess, like Enderby, sees both extremes as myths. Enderby quotes Wagner—wir sind ein wenig frei. A little free—to choose between good and evil. That is the moral of that book with a moral, A Clockwork Orange. Alex is chemically conditioned to "like present the feel of the conditioned to "like present the conditioned to "like present the surgest and destruction. It may be that one needs a Catholic upbringing to appreciate the full urgency of Burgess's dichotomies. Like the Pet Beast, everything in his world is dual, flesh and spirit, as well as good and evil. Those who can claim that all life is one are either dangerous normative doctors and psychologists or the showdown with a mysterious female visitor, as in Enderby Outside, who knows his poems. This one, unlike the golden lady

The Medici Guns By Martin Woodhouse and Robert Ross (Dent, £2.95)

The Underside By H. R. F. Keating

(Macmillan, £2.95) Zoë Oldenbourg, in a note on historical novels, remarks "to praise an author for his or her scholarship, whether real or presumed, amounts to calling that author a plagiarist and a pedant". With that whizzing around my head, I still wish to praise the research, energy and invention which have gone into The Medici Guns and The Un-

Martin Woodhouse is a writer of splendidly whacky thrillers (Tree Frog, Rock Baby and others) and his co-author, Robert Ross, is a Leonardo da Guns Leonardo is 25, in the service of Lorenzo the Magnificent (himself only 28). Engaged on the vital task of the siege of Castelmonte are the Medici gunners, a stalwart crew, incredibly tough, and like as not, deaf after the age of 20, banging away at walls 10 feet thick with 9 inch cannon balls. The scene shifts from Florence to the Rome of Sixtus IV, to Verocchio's studio, to the study of ballistics and warfare (when even a treatise on gunpowder had to have the Church's imprimatur). Through this goes the figure of Leonardo, free man, thinker, fighter, painter, inventor. Leonardo's Notebooks and Florentine history (the book covers the Pazzi conspiracy) are welded seamlessly together with fictional characters and events into an immensely entertaining sance violence. The authors are planning a series, and hurry, hurry, is all I can say. H. R. F. Keating has deserted the crime novel and written a

Victorian romance. Godfrey Mann is a successful society painter—his "Torquato Tasso leaving the City of Ferrara" was bought by Queen Victoria for $500. He falls in love with Elizabeth, an American, one of the "new women", for she is a qualified doctor. Not qualified to practice, of course, being a foreigner, the 1858 Act saw to that. They marry, and could be the ideal couple. But Godfrey has an inseplicable attraction to has an inexplicable attraction to all that is most vicious, filthy and degraded in Victorian low life, picking up and spending days and nights with the lowest kind of prostitute.

Mr Keating has delved into "the underside" of social history here and come up with some horrors, known to Mayhew, and to the Booths (who founded and to the Booths (who founded the Salvation Army) and no doubt to people like Bearrice Webb as well. Elizabeth is no prudish miss, but a mature and outspoken woman, but even so, the resolving of their difficulties seems a thought unlikely. Would Elizabeth have used the word "psychological"? Freud wasn't born till 1856. . . I'm being pedantic.

The Sovereign Lady A Life of Elizabeth Vassall, third Lady Holland

By Sonia Keppel (Hamish Hamilton, £7.59)

A great hostess is usually to some A great hostess is usually to some degree a monster: rapacious, arrogant, unscrupulous, with all the nastier instincts of the stamp-collector allied to those of a circus ring-master. Success once achieved ensures that once achieved ensures that these characteristics grow rapidly more evident. Lady Holland, châtelaine of Holland House, was thus unlikely to prove a sympathetic figure, but it has taken Sonia Keppel to demonstrate how uniquely detestable she was.

Life for Lady Holland really began when, after several years of semi-detached misery with her first husband, she met and eloped with the young, rich and amiable Vassall Holland. Though a man could divorce and still remain in society, in 1797 for a woman it was social suicide. Lady Holland's proper conduct was to remain discreetly in the background and avoid offending the susceptibilities of those ladies who had kept their indiscretions private—to "trot ebout in the grounds and feed the ducks and chickens", as the ducks and chickens, as Frances Wyndham advised her. Instead she determined to turn Holland House into the Holland House into the pivot of London life, the place in which all the most brilliant figures of the political and literary worlds would meet to intrigue or amuse would meet to intrigue of animal themselves. Incredibly, she succeeded. Under her aegis Holland House became the centre of Whig society. anyone who cares for it can afford to ignore Sisson. The present book starts with his most recent verse, including "The Usk", which is remarkable in speaking from places where the mind prefers silence—Christ is a language in which we speak to God/And also God, so that we speak in truth. As a guideline, a reviewer might refer attention to a valediction which comes half-way through:

Anxious to complete your lechery before Christ came since much of Sisson's journey is a return to source and an attempt to reknit Christianity to the pagan world, or rather to explore the relationship of the flesh of paganism and the reli-gion of the Incarnation. Do not fail to stop at "The Crucifix",

"Human Relations", "The Garden of Epicurus", "A Letter to John Donne", and "In a Dark Wood". These will read you. Indeed, if you are a poet the difficulty may be in starting again once they have done so.

The poems in Philip Larkin's High Windows (Faber, £1.40) remain loyal to past victories on a small patch of ground. Once more Larkin provides the modest lyrical bits (Cut Grass, The Trees); the formal essay-poems in which a subject—visiting the sea, looking at old men, disliking hospitals—is treated in metres de-

Waiting for the Party The Life of Frances Hodgson

By Ann Thwaite (Secker & Warburs, £3.50)

Everyone who has looked twice at Frances Hodgson Burnett and her writings has re-gretted Little Lord Fountieroy. For one thing the public image of the child—that velver-clad star of stage, screen and dower-house does not fully corre-spood with the creature of the book; for another, his universal execution has obscured the greater achievements of his creator. There is an unexpected sturdi-

There is an unexpected sturdiness about the best of her novels for adults (That Lass & Louries, The Making of a Marchioness and—if Mrs Thwaite is to be believed—Through One Administration) and this quality, cardial in the second of the seco ried into her romances for children, gives them an intensity and a virality too often lacking in conventional stories of everyday life. It is not surprising that our praise for A Little Princess and The Secret Garden is as loud now as ever it has been in the 60-odd years There is more to Ann
from Little Lord Fauntleroy. There is also the task of rescuing her from her own positionious reputation. On the first page of the book Mrs. Thwaite confesses that she could not believe the author of the former Confesses that she The Secret Garden to be the "self-centred and unattractive character" of hearsay, and her chief motive for burrowing into what proved to be a mountain of evidence—letters, publishers' records, personal recollections was to let us see Mrs. Hodgson Burnett free of false trappings-innuendo and par pality answered by the facts. The trouble is though that the trappings aren't so easily removed. Not for nothing was the lady called "Fluffy" and not for nothing did she like to deck her shortish stature in ribbons and faills. One feels that the glamorous exterior the osternations display of wealth, the eventually "overbearing" self-confidence were very much part of the total character, and they covered a figure not necessarily unattractive, but certainly not conforming to conventional expectations—a tough, chain-smoking Mancunian, working like hell and keeping her accounts in black and white tucked away in a dispatch box. dispatch box.

For this . reason, Thwaite's valuable biographical Thwaite's variable hographical endeavour, which started off with the very kindest of intentions, is constantly in danger of being thwarted by the subject it seeks to defend. Certainly Mrs. Thwaite has gone a long warmen Marchanitz. way to disprove Marghanita Laskr's statement that Mrs Burnett's books are far more enjoyable if one knows as little as possible of what they reveal of her own personality", if only because she has shown so much because she has shown so much more of the personality than we had been allowed to see before—the crisp, informal wit, the very positious natural sympathy for children. But even so, it is still very difficult to like Mrs Hodgson Burnert or to feel that he should have sained prefer. she should have gained preferential access to the party for which she had to wait (as we all have to) so vainly and so long.

Confrontation Middle East War and World Politics

By Walter Laqueur (Wildwood House, £2.50; Abacus, 75p)

Abacus, 75p)
Only 6 per cent of public opinion in Britain, 8 per cent in France and 16 per cent in West Germany favoured the Arabs during the Middle East War. This might be taken as evidence that the chiral and the control of the c that the opinion polls were up a gumtree again or, more probably, that a country's foreign policy is decided by more irre-sistible courses than mere public opinion.

Bur it might help to explain how Israel misread the writing on the wall between the wars and how while militarily brilliant she surrendered political victory to her Arab adversaries. As Professor Laqueur points out it was political not military failure which characterized Israel's performance and an inquiry into military preand an inquiry into military pre-paredness last Yom Kippur could only reveal part of the truth—and the smaller part at cently subdued to their occa-sions; and the tough stuff. The last is least interesting— Larkin goes on about other (younger) chaps getting their sexual share, and more, while it seems (from "Sad Steps") that he only gets out of bed to piss and look at the moon, or gets back into bed to write poems about pissing and looking at the moon. There's something laugh-able about this. The line falls our of that particular poem and takes a cruel peek at some of the others.

If Larkin visits Dublin you it Larkin visits Dubin you can bet there'll be a funeral before the end of the first stanza. And when he raises his voice how, letting off the self-satirical brakes to bring one of the longish pieces to a halt, the result is an alliterative whimper—no more smashing "poetical" cliches as in "An Arundal per—no more smasning poetical" cliches as in "An Arundel used to be Anthony Thwaite's as well, but now he has read St Augustine and in New Conjessions (Oxford, f1.50) tries on that saint's skin to create "a personal book of meditation and transmutation". The dove is not our pigeon, as it says on page 37. Who is going to disagree? I prefer my Augustine straight; and my Thwaite cutting his suburban grass with Larkin's old mower:

Still, the same old Larkin (like Eliot, he always seems a generation older than he is) remains the same decent old Larkin. His unfurnished poetry of furnished rooms is certainly his own.

Of the three most notable—deserves. Now we have a full biography of Douglas, which perhaps rather misses the point: that his poetry was the only important thing about him.

His rather unremarkable life is hour, because they had apparently emerged so badly in the fighting. But their political strategy, if not their military factics, was sound and in the final analysis it is a political solution which will have to be found to the problems of the Middle East Israel with her tiny population and limited resources could not hope for anything else could not hope for anything else particularly when one takes into account her heavy dependence upon the United States. Books on contemporary history fall into three groups, those which explain what happened those which say why it happened the way it did and those which look at the results of what happened. The Sunday Times In-sight book brilliantly scooped the market in group one. Pro-fessor Laqueur has obviously been racing to be the first in group two. One wonders if per-haps he should have stayed his hand and waited for the results of the continuing peace negotia-

It is well worth reading by sailors and landsmen reading by sailors and landsmen alike, and for the long-distance cruising man there are first-class factual appendices.

Cockleshell Journey, by John Ridgway (Hodder, £2.95). John Ridgway, who clearly prefers his sailing vessels to be challengingly small (he rowed across the Atlantic) describes a voyage made with his wife and two like-minded spirits. We read of him cruising among the ica-bergs and tide rares off the Chilean coast in a bouncing armada of two 10 foot long rub-ber boats driven by outboard motors. When the quartette step ashore they bag an unknown ice cap, show that Monte Inaccessible does not live up to its name, navigate the Magellan Straits, negotiate narrows Straits, negotiate narrows plugged with killer whales, and consume innumerable brews of tea in totally inhospitable surroundings. Power of the bigot

The Akenham Burial Case

By Ronald Fletcher

(Wildwood House, 53.95) The mainland bit of the United Kingdom tends to think it has put religion behind it. Among its many incomprehensions over Ulster is a complete inability to grasp the power of religion, including religious bigotry. But Ronald Fletcher's The Akenham Burial Case reminds us how recent is even relative freedom from bigotry. In 1878, in the Suffolk village of Akenham, the two-year-old son of a Baptist farm labourer died, and there was no practical alternative to burying him in the local parish churchyard. On the day of the funeral, there was a quarrel at the churchyard gate between the Anglican rector, the Rev George Drury, and a Dissent-ing minister, who had come to hold a service outside conse-crated ground. At that date, the unbaptized could not legally be unbaptized could not legally be buried with full ceremony in a churchyard; and the child was unbaptized because Baptists leave this for adulthood. Drury was a clergyman—the Anglo-Catholic holder of an inherited benefice—who held to the letter of laws. The child was, in the upshot, "buried like a dog," behind the church—which was not as church—which was not as strange then as now, when still-born children might be interred in banks or ditches. But the East Anglian Daily Times duly ran a long report of the row. It was written anonymously by the Dissenter. It raised a parish-pump row into national scandal, for Drury sued for libel. He won, but received only 40s damages and had to pay his costs. Public subscription paid the paper's: its editor bought the dead child a headstone (which still stands); and in 1880 a Burial Laws Amendment

Act finally passed parliament, after years of trying, and erased this Nonconformist indignity. Fletcher was put on to the Fletcher was put on to the story through a scrapbook kept by ac Ips wich man, into which reports of the case had been pasted. Fletcher has checked and added to this, but the result still resembles a scrapbook.
Long verbatim extracts dominate it, and it cries out for dipping or for reading in snatches—especially as Fletcher. in his short commentaries, has reacted away from his past as a university Professor of Sociology into writing rather gushy prose. But the book is evocative of several aspects of our recent

Firstly, the sheer vigour of the local press in the days before ads were such a central before ads were such a central concern. Second, the harshness of rural life: there is the raw material for an East Anglian Hardy here. Third, the remarkable variety that the Anglican church has allowed within itself: Drury, do-it-yourself stonecarver and biretta'd priest, was a peculiar man, indeed. was a peculiar man, indeed. Fourth, the religious prejudice that we are now too urban and too urbane to go in for.

The opponents of Drury widened their attack on him to include his Papist views and get-up. That anti-Rome hostility has lasted longer, though sometimes covertly, than hostility towards Dissent. I am sure it lies somewhere though among the causes of the growing wish to jerrison Ulster. After all, even if some Irishmen are Protestant, it is common knowledge that most of them are only

Stratford-on-Avon

Since Stratford's last approach to the Shakespeare romances we have had the National Theatre's

Tempest, and it is a relief to find that this has bad no discernible effect on the RSC. There is plenty of inducement for turning Cymbeline into a masque speciacular: but the Stratford directors (John Barton, Barry Kyle, and Clifford Williams) have resisted it. They take the play as it stands with all its ecceptric shifts of locale and patchwork story-telling, accepting these as the price of some of the most highly developed verse Shakespeare wrote.

The effect is to re-focus attention on the whole enigma of the last plays. First, the familiar fact that the quality of the poetry grows in inverse ratio to plot construction and dramatic psychology. Second, the curious feeling that at the end of his life

Shakespeare was writing repeated variations on the same pattern. Loss and reunion; regeneration through the power of generation through the power of youth; the same elements appear again and again. Events, instead of arising from circumstance, seem set up like artificial hurdles so as to put the characters through a spiritual obstacle course. They are happy and clear-sighted; then some curse descends and smires them with mexplicable blindness.

composer's work. The man is seen surrounded by characters from his operas, whose relation-ships and artitudes he manipulates in an attempt to achieve the aims he has in mind.

The condescending attitude of later generations to his once highly respected music dramas finds expression in a comic treatment of a jealous group from Les Huguenots and a ever, with an interlude in cheerful band of skaters from which Christoph Eschenbach Le Prophète (some attractive plays Schumann's Kinderszenen Ashion paraphrases here in the choreography). The end of this part strikingly mixes farce and tragedy as the composer, crowned withlaurels, finds his characters beginning to give at the knees or hips and sink to the ground. All his desperate attempts to re-store them are vain. Max Midinet's vivid portrait of the dandified bur earnest composer, ex-cellently done throughout, rises to greatness at this difficult

"Schumann in Endenich" introduces the characters: Schomann is torn between his two separately embodied natures, Florestan and Eusebius, also his own compositions is a re-minder of the sense in which a composer's work exists outside himself and may achieve an immortality denied to the man.

This thought recurs at the end of the evening when all the dancers from both halves, identically in the control of the evening when all the dancers from both halves, identically in the control of the evening when all the dancers from both halves, identically in the control of the evening when all the control of the evening when the tically dressed in white tights or tunics, return for an epilogue to the adagio espressivo from Schumann's second symaudience alike. There are some inevitable awkwardnesses in unusual and ambitious theme, but I found that the work's boldness and originality gripped in spite of treese. Also, it contains some of Neumeier's most eloquent choreography. To give just one example, I would point to the exquisitely musical solo for Rosa Scart to the tenth of the Kinderszenen, full of shirts of weight and phrasing that perfectly match the playing. Even so, I wondered how it would appeal to the general public. In fact, the first-night reception was mainly very warm. A small handful of spectators booed Neumeier, a few more demonstrated against Eschenbach: most unfairly, if on the strength of his piano-playing. Perhaps they dis-approved of his debut in the Meyerbeer Paraphrases as an opera house conductor. I can imagine that the piece might be made to sound even more bril-liant, but he gave it pace and flexibility. Killmayer conducted his own music with eminently satisfactory results. Marco Arturo Marelli's decor of nets rises or falls as required or hers rises or lars as required to suggest clouds, a stage, the mists of madness or of time. Although the main weight of the action falls on Midinet and on François Klaus's sensitive representation of Schumann, the work calls for a large cast with many soloists, and there is phony. The processional parterns of this, the high aspiring lifts, bring a feeling of continuity and serenity to close the ambieness schedule planned for ambirious schedule planned for company not a weak link anywhere. Excuse me for a moment while I unlock my heels from behind my head. Tuesday night's programme contained such assertions of physical control and such aspirations of spiritual release that you were bound to be caught up in Walter Mitty dreams that you too could subdue the flesh. A documentary programme, however, from Hugh Burnett is not to be treated facetiously As he showed us so brilliantly with South Africa, this is a man who likes to get to the heart of the matter. So it was this time. We were in India to see and to

From the sunlit Ganges and quiet exposition of the Hindu faith we travelled the country to meet the people who practise yoga. Grave, handsome figures demonstrated the cardinal positions and we heard of the distem pers they were supposed to dispel. An Indian woman doctor even maintained that the practice had some of the answers—she would not claim the cure—to such diseases as diabetes.

We heard about the snake within us and an old man bade us listen to the music it could produce. That was rather disappointing. But another yogi bent metal with his eyelid, lay on broken glass as a concrete roller and then a heavy lorry ran over him, and even held back a five-ton elephant.

It was an impressive, often beautiful yet curiously incon-clusive odyssey. Hugh Bur-nett, who produced and nar-rated the programme with Tony Pierce-Roberts as his cameraman certainly brought India into our living rooms. But like the manifestations of our Western spiri tualism the circus tricks seemed oddly mundane and in the end for all the philosophy yoga seemed no more than just another of the ways in which imprisoned Man struggles to be

Three quiet cheers

The Snowdroppers Hampstead

Charles Lewsen

Three quiet but heartfelt cheers for Alun Richards who wrote this play and for Ronald Lewis who played in it three years ago at the enchanting Watermill at Bagnor, and who has now kept faith and brought it to London. And now let me keep faith with Mr Richards, telling you all I can about his entertainment without revealing any of the incidents. Oh! Have I said entertainment "? Not the kind of word we critics like to use without a sneer; but it does do remarkably well to describe a play which tells an interesting story in a way that keeps you guessing.

It starts in a snowbound cotrage in Wales, where a woman is woken up by a man stealing apples from a paper bag. And there I must leave the incidents. because I want them to take you by surprise at Hampstead or at whatever West End theatre (pre-

It celebrates a brief victory over impotence— "You paradised me" says the articulate but ignorant manand having brought us within spirting distance of sentimentality, blows upon us an air as chill as that which seems to be sweeping the hills outside Eric Critchley's set. It takes account of the assumptions many of us make about male and female, criminal and police, and it creates its best effects by putting a banana skin beneath these assumptions. But though, armed with this realization, I anticipated one of Mr Richards's first act coups, the succeeding ones took me consis-tently and pleasurably by surprise.

Mr Lewis could find more absurdity in the fantasies of his character, but he conveys lone-liness finely. Fiona Walker could more firmly hint the feeling that breaks out so truly in the second act. With less hurry, Roger Gart-land could convey the passion of his role more firmly, and the sound effects are not worthy of Roger Williams's faithful pro-which the play transfers.

But this I can say: it deals which gave me great pleasure lightly but faithfully with the sublimation of sex and filial others equal pleasure.

Inspiriting Schubert

Alan Blyth Nothing became night's concert so much as its leave-taking, an inspiriting, whirlwind account of the finale to Schubert's C major symphony. Lawrence Foster's read-ing of the work had been ening of the work had been enjoyable and well managed up to that point, but from the opening bars of the last movement, pulsating and expectant, it fitted the name of the symphony itself, "Great".

As a whole. Foster judged his tempi well and such changes as he allowed himself within a movement's basic speed were always logical, but in the opening movement just a suggestion of jog-trot seemed to rob the pacing of its vitality. Without probing quite to the beart of the Andante con moto, he saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to be saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement where the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement in the saw to it that the triple equivocal slow movement in the opening movement just made.

If this performance of the Tuesday Schubert reminded us once many nineteenth-century symphonies, particularly those of pnonies, particularly those of Mendelssohn and Dvorak, the programme's opening work, Samuel Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance (dating from 1956, although the music derives from an earlier ballet and suite) shows just how much music of that period was influenced by twenperiod was influenced by twentieth-century father figures. The characters themselves seem temporary embodiments of forces that assume different shapes at different times. Poor besoned Cymbeline, misgoverning Britain in obedience to his evil queen is a particularly obvious example. It is as though Sycorax had subdued Prospero and taken over control of the island: promoting the enslaved Caliban into the brutish half-witted princeling Cloten. The Stratford production does not shed any blinding new light on the play, but it does redirect attention to the endlessly faschnating puzzle of completing the Shakespearian circle.

Having overreached himself abrupt changes between pathos, horror and broad fun. He also narrates the battle scenes from stage directions while the con-quest of the Romans is staged in slow-motion pantomime beyond an up-stage traverse. This is a distinct improvement on the scrambled confusion of the battle dialogue.

Having overreached himself in his carve-up of King John, Mr Barton very correctly lists the liberties he has taken with Cymbeline. A note informs us that 820 lines have been cut, and that the part of Cornelius the doctor has been enlarged. This is a happy stroke. The play is a fairy tale, and in Cornelius it has now acquired a story-teller—like Gower in Pericles—who acts as an intermediary between the modern spectator and the fabulous events, and adapts his tone so as to prepare one for the

Snow Knight wins Derby after change of tactics

Snow Knight, ridden by Brian Taylor, trained by Peter Nelson, at Upper Lambourn in Berkshire, at Upper Lambourn in Berkshire, and owned by two Canadians, Neil and Sharon Phillips, won the 195th running of the Derby Stakes at Epsom yesterday by two lengths from Imperial Prince. At 50-1, Snow Knight was the longest priced winner of this classic since Psidium landed the spoils by an identical distance in 1961.

Afterwards, his rider, Yves Saint-Martin, said that he felt Nonoalco choke and gurgle at a critical stage at the foot of the hill. I must admit there were many of us watching in the stands who did likewise.

It is difficult to say whether Nonoalco swallowed his tongue. He was certainly showing all the symptoms of having done so when he virtually pulled himself up soon after passing the post, gasping for breath and with bulging eyes.

Tony Murray complained that Giacometti failed to handle the course and added that he would be only too happy to take the winner. course and added that he would be only too happy to take the winner on again on a flat, galloping track. Snow Knight being led in by Mrs Sbaron Phillips, the owner, and Major Peter Nelson, the trainer delight was tempered by the fact that he had sold Snow Knight's dam. Snow Blossom, carrying him, to Mr Lilkey for only 1,150 guineas. McCallister had, he told me, simply got bored of her. Boredom can be expensive, but such are the seesaws of racing and breeding.

So Snow Knight eventually found his way to Nelson's stables in Upper Lambourn. As a two-year-old he ran Giacometti close in the Champague Stakes at Doncaster but had been beaten in his two races this season by Bustino. On the face of that he looked a forlorn hope. But at Taylor's suggestion it was decided to change the riding tactics yesterday of all days. Hitherto, Snow Knight had been ridden from behind. This time the plan was to make the fullest possible use of his stamina. After at first causing his convexions heart flutters when he fullest possible use of his stamma.

was always in the van and even took up the running when there was still three-quarters of a mile left. This, Taylor admitted afterwards, was earlier than he had intended, but he felt that his colt was going so well within himself that there was no point in waiting for the supposedly faster horses in the field to pounce.

In fact, the race followed a strange pattern from the word go. Snow Knight, Imperial Prince and Giacometi were always in the first half dozen and they had the race to themselves from Tattenham Corner. With hindsight, it is only fair to say that Taylor's opportunism won him his first Derby. Taylor had previously finished second in the race in 1969 on Shoemaker. The Nelsons had had only one runner in the race before, and he did not distinguish himself. Until yesterday they regarded Whistler, that brilliant sprinter, as their best horse.

Now for the future. Snow Knight is not engaged in the Irish Derby, so he will be kept for the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes at Ascot, where the pressure of this year's three-year-olds Actioning Show Knight was folled on Mr Lilley's stud in Derbyshire, he cannot actually claim to have planned the mating of this winner of the Derby James of McCallister did that. He was overjoyed yesterday at having been responsible, even if his many layer than the locality who occasion. It is necessary to turn a blind eye to Dahlia's two failures this season to fancy her chance of beating the colts today. One must recall her victories in the lish.

Hue-Williams have two live hopes for the second half of the season. By running so well, Imperial Prince paid a vivid compliment to Jupiter Pluvius, who had beaten him so decisively at Chester. Jupiter Pluvius missed yesterday's race because, like so many of Bruce Hobbs's horses, he had been struck down by a virus. In fact, his owner. Tom Blackwell, told me afterwards that he would not have risked him on this ground because the horse had been bothered by sore shins throughout his two year-old career. Mr Blackwell can reflect upon the happenings resterday with a degree of satisfaction and think, at least, that he has a bright spark for the futnre. Bustino ran like a St Leger horse, as I thought he would, but as that was about my only accurate observation yesterday, it is nothing to be proud of.

Afterwards, Lady Beaverbrook's racing manager, Sir Gordon Richards, told me that Bustino may well be allowed to take his chance in the Grand Prix de Paris at the end of this month. Hue-Williams have two live hopes Dahlia, unbeaten on her three Dahlia, unbeaten on her three ventures out of France last year, and chosen Racehorse of the Year in this country because of her superb victory in the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes at Ascot in July, will try to become the fourth filly to win the Coronation Cup since the war at Epsom today. If she wins she will be the rwelfth winner of this coveted prize by a horse trained in France in the same period. Petite Etoile, in 1960 and 1961, Park Top In 1969, and Lupe in 1971 were the 1969, and Lupe in 1971 were the Epsom.

The second two-year-old race, the Woodcott, went to Mendip Man, who made every yard of the running and bravely held off the late challenge of Common Land. Mendip Man was bred by Jack Davis, belongs to his wife Brenda, and is trained by Clive Brittain. Mr Davis, who also bred Mon Fils, the surprise winner of last year's 2,000 Guineas. believes that his wife's colt needs more time to grow to his strength, and has decided that Mendip Man will miss Ascot, as they believe Mendip Mas will be a better horse in the autumn.

The second horse, Common Land. Oaks, the Ascot race, the Wash Oaks, the Ascot race, the Washington DC International, and the way she beat Tennyson in the Prix Niel at Longchamp last September. Dahila was not herself in the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, in which she finished behind Buoy and Tennyson, but she recovered her poise in a glorious manner at Laurel. At her best she ought to be capable of outpacing Tennyson and Buoy this afternoon.

Tennyson, the other challenger from France, was thought unlucky not to have won the French Derby last year. He won their great midsummer test for stayers, the Grand Prix de Parls, but the Grand Prix de Paris, but the three-year-old fillies of 1973 were considered to be superior to their male counterparts and Dahlia drove this point home at Long-champ later in the season when she toyed with Tennyson in the Prix Niel. Tennyson finished in front of her in the Prix Ganay last month, when they were both put in their place by Allez France, but I still feel inclined to forgive Dahlia for her disappointing effort that day and give her another chance.

Buoy, wearing blinkers for the first time this season, won the Yorkshire Cup in the manner of a true stayer last month. He beat Ballyhot, and should confirm his Ballyhot, and should confirm his superiority today. But at her best Dahlia ought to be too fast for him and she ought to be capable of outpacing Conor Pass, who won the Irish St Leger last year. Conor Pass was ridden in an enterprising way by Paul Jarman at Leopardstown last Saturday when he won the Player-Wilk Stakes. This success was due, I am told, to the jockey's opportunism.

No one will be more pleased than Lady Beaverbrook to win the Rosebery Memorial Handicap, because it was the late Lord Rosebery who bought her first racehorse. Rosebid. Majesty, her runner this afternoon, is improving with every race, and his most recent effort, in the Predominate Stakes at Goodwood, puts him in Stakes at Goodwood, puts him in the picture. He is trained by Scoble Breasley at Epsom.

Brian Swift and Arthur Piet are may have the satisfaction of sad-dling a winner this afternoon.

Three remaining seeds stand firm

The three remaining seeds in the British amateur golf chambidushing stood their ground yesterday as the last 32 were decided. Trivor Homer and Hugh Stuart won twice. Steart rather uncertainty against Rodney James, the Midland golfer, and their much more convincingly against Wight, the son of a former Scottish champion. Homer played as well as he had to and was not down at any stage of the day.

John Davies, the third seed, appeared only once but had a really hard match against Garry Harvey, a 19 year old Scot who won the boys' championship two years ago after being runner-up the year before. There was a good deal of adventurous staff before the turn. After two wild shots at the Sixth. Davies pitched dead and his opponent had to hole from five feet for the half, while at the seventh Davies again came our of the bunker dead for a balf. But this is Davies's way, and that with the infiling strokes he can make evicting players to waith. All credit to Harvey, who withstood the bardest form of strack in marchplay and nursed two up having holed from the edge of the eighth green.

In the seedless first half there is oute a severy Koedlah flavour.
There are six in the top quaster of eight, the other two being Stors.
Bucher, one of them, meris Hedges this morning for a piace in the last 16, and if he wins he will be in the same position that his lather. Mel-ville, was 20 years ago here in the same event. A good fight is in pros-pect for both players are in form.

After tracking the leader in the early stages, Averof went smoothly to the front below the distance and forged clear to win on the bridle. Averof is about the only three-year-old colt to have enhanced rather than diminished his reputation as the season has advanced. After his win in the Dea Stakes at Chester, he put up a fine performance in a handicap at Sandown Park last time out, when narrowly failing to concede 12 lb to the five-year-old Rascolnik. His fluent success here endorsed the fact that he is a fast-improving colt, who cannot now be considered much behind the best of his age group.

The second horse, Common Land, showed signs of inexperience when first asked for his effort, but was making ground hand over first in the last 100yd and would have won in another stride or two. He is a nicely made young colt, and should soon be winning. The favourite, Young Pretender, ridden by Lester Piggott, was in difficulties a long way from home, and never looked likely to justify his market position. Piggott, who, as well as being

Averof belongs to Captain Lemos, second training success of the afternoon for Clive Brittain, who was this is the colt's next objective. Spring Stone, second to Sea Prince in last year's Dally Mirror Prince in last year's Dally Mirror Handicap, reversed the tables yesterday when he beat Owenboliska by half a length, with Sea Prince a length away third. A five-year-old bay gelding trained by Peter Walwyn, Spring Stone is as game as they come.

Connors wants to get On grass now

James Connors, of Los, Angeles, aged 21, is one of those engaging tennis players with an infectiously boyish test for the game. With typically resilient good spirits, the Australian and South African champion has quickly begun to realize the potential advantages of being barred from the French championships, which began yesterday on the clay courts of Roland Garros. Connors is in Manchester for the Northern tournament, sponsored by the Refuge Assurance Company. He said yesterday: "I would like to have played in Paris, But getting on to grass in Wis misorcant.

"My Mom talked to Pancho Segura and he told her I should get on to grass if I didn't get to Paris. I'm having two weeks on grass before Northugham—with $100,000 [£40,000], that's a big tournament—and three weeks before Wimbledon.

"The first year I played Wimbledon, I won Northingham and Queen's Club and got to the quarters at Wimbledon. I was so hot: bur I ran into Nastase and he was even hotter. I haven't played a big tournament for a while, since the US indoor circuit finished. So I will be a little more eager than I would have been if I'd played Rome or Paris." Looking ahead to Wimbledon he gad: "To win on grass, or win any long tournament, you have to have a bit of luck. It depends who's getting the break."

The final stroke within the dying minute saw Macdonald, who had replaced Worthington midway through the second half, take a long through pass from Lindsay and with only Maric to beat slide the ball left past the post. Football can be both judge and jury. Had that gone home it would have been no justice to the hosts, yet, to say it again, this new England earned their draw but nor a victory. It was an elegant, pure match, full of style and creation. Dagit; the Yngoslav captain on the left wing, was as elusive as ever with his fluttering left foot, once in the second half creating tomething out of nothing only to flick the ball not only over Clemence but also over the crossbar. Surrey had then scored 249 for seven, and had been in peril of scoring many fewer. A century by Storey, after they had been reduced to 76 for five, led their recovery, and a bold last wicker stand completed it.

Edwards and Howarth scored at a run a minute for the first half hour, looking full of runs, but Howarth was howled by Stevenson for 22, and Roope after batting for a quarter of an hour, was also bowled by Stevenson, for nought. This precipitated a collapse, before first Jackman and then—with a good deal of luck—Intikhab helped Storey in the rebuilding. Storey or throw-in clearly to become a favourite of the crowd. In the South African side perhaps the biggest surprise is the decision to play the Western Province combination of Roy McCallum at scram half and Snyman at stand-off. Pope, a wing threequarter, who has obviously been picked because of his good form for Western Province against the Lions, is another unexpected choice. As expected, Eastern Province's tight-head prop forward, Marais, will captain the South African side. He has already met the Lions once this season—when they beat Eastern Province 28—14 in a match marred by fighting on the pitch. Before all this excitement it had been an innings of 81 not out by Sainsbury with varying degrees of support that finally had ensured Hampshire their four batting points. Hampshire were 221 for six with 75 overs gone when Sainsbury was joined by Nigel Cowley, who was one year old when Sainsbury first played for Hampshire. Cricket Correspondent Fanciful though it would have seemed only five years ago, it is now high time for England to take a Test series off India again. They have lost the last two, first at home and then away. in spite of all this, England should win the series which begins today at Old Trafford. For one thing the optimism engendered towards the end of their tour in the West Indies lives on. That was a great triumph at Port of Spain For another, the conditions are more likely to favour England. With only 42 runs in four ispings against them this summer, Boycett has a scure to settle with the Indians. Solkar, little more than a makeshift bowler, has had him three times. CHESTERFIELD: Surrey have scored 346 runs for nine wickets against Derbyshire.

The morning was commandingly, but, as it turned out, delusively attractive, like a fairy woman of the Hebrides or a call by Boycott. Where better could one be, I thought, as I contemplated the pretty Chesterfield ground in the beaming sunshine? (How foolish I was not to take off my pullover.) The Surrey capatin, who had won the toss, on a plumb pitch, against a Derbyshire side deprived, for one reason or another, of nearly half a bundred Lancastrian overs. His pace is nearly fast, and he maintains it for a long time. He has a good build for the job, with full shoulders and bottom, and be walks back to his mark, and even to walks back to his mark, and even to his place at third man, as if he camed wait to get on with the game. He is 23 years old, born in Derby, developed through the local league, in his first season with the county. It was not exactly a riproaring day, yesterday, when Middlesex used up the greater part of a warm, suntry morning and afternoon scor-ing 255 runs for six wickets from was it a day when you could say that this part or that had been better than the next. Nevertheless, a certain optimism hing about in a sticky heat and there were moments when Smith, Radley, Barlow and, later, Murray, seemed poised to lift the match from its meandering and rather uninterestice Course.

Alas. these four had been cut down some way from the hundred we had hoped for, and on a pitch that was shy and uncommitted neither Lever's nor Shuttleworth's pace, nor the speed of Simmons, nor the slow left-arm bowling of Hughes could inflict great damage or industry conficient in Middleser's

So it was to be an uneventful day Middlesex collected three points for patting, and Lancashire the same for bowling. Smith made 50 for the second time this season and for the second time this season and Radley passed a half century for the third time. Murray, having shrugged off his first ball from Lever, which had hit him a resounding blow upon the head, made 43, and Barlow, who made 45, reached a new milestone, albeit a modest one, his highest score. This was Barlow's first match for Middlesex. A former student at Loughborough Colleges, for whom he played rugby football, Barlow, 24, had made a suitable impression by the nme he got out. That was at 228 when he was the sixth wicker

Barlow had been slow to start, scoring just seven runs in his first hour at the crease. But the second half of his innings was different and we had some powerful hitting, with the left hander dancing down the pitch, driving and pulling the slow bowlers. Two balls later with a half century in ms sights Barlow charged to meet the bowler for the last time, the ball zooming skywards over mid-on where Wood, who had a bright, burning sun to contend with, held his catch.

A He's taking less exercise these days.

B He's not careful enough what he eats at his work.

C He smokes too much.

Are we right? Then what can you do about it? Weekends and evenings, try to ration his cigarettes. One way to do that is to get him away from the TV and into the open air. Very important, feed him meals that will balance his business eating. Always something light - with Flora.

WHY FLORA?

Because Flora is the margarine made with sunflower oil. Very digestible. Very fresh and nice. It's higher in polyunsaturates than any other spread. It is low in saturated fats and it contains absolutely no animal fats. And as for him? He'll like the change.

Aegean conflict stirs the embers of an age-old enmity

After centuries of deep-rooted resentment and distrust, Greece and Turkey show greater aptitude for inventing new prob-lems than in resolving old ones. Their latest quarrel over the Aegean Continental Shelf is all the more alarming as it touches off latent feelings on both sides of the sun-drenched archipel-

The Turks tried to consolidate their position last week by dispatching a heavily-escorted survey ship over the disputed areas in Aegean international waters. A warlike episode was averted only by drastic western intervention. The Greeks, who had threatened to blow up any ship that tried to challenge their Aegean dominance, had to swallow their pride. They said they were keeping an eye on the research vessel in case it violated Greek sovereign rights. The Greeks invoke a tale of Hodja sits in a crowded hamman, mumbling to him-self: "200 and 200 makes 500." A neighbour turns to correct him: "No, Hodja, it makes 400." "Of course not", Hodja insists, "It is 500." Four hun-dred!" protests the other. "All right", sighs Nasreddin, stretching out his palm. "As all here can witness, I am a reasonable man when it comes to debts: I shall take the 400."

· Turkey's claim over the eastern half of the Aegean seabed relies on the exceptions rather than the rules of the Geneva Convention on the Continental Shelf of April 29, 1958, which defined the concept of the shelf

. . . the seabed and subsoil of the submarine areas adjacent to the coast, but outside the erea of the territorial sea, to a depth of 200 metres or, beyond that limit, to where the depth of the superjacent waters admits of the exploitation of the natural resources of the said areas." This is valid for both mainland and islands.

Awarded oil exploration rights

Ankara has laid claim to and awarded oil exploration rights in areas lying on the eastern half of the Aegean seabed on the grounds that this is one of the "special circumstances" mentioned by the convention. The Turkish side, in fact, argues that the Aegean con-tains hundreds of Greek islands and islets, some of them within a stone's throw of the Anatolian coast. This configuration would deny Turkey a fair share of the the average Turk were left in natural resources in the absolute ignorance of each Article Six of the Geneva Convention invoked by Turkey, establishes that, in the case of states with opposite coasts, their coastal shelves are determined by "mutual agreement". Failing this, it goes on, and unless another boundary is justified by special circum-this should be the median line between them. The Greek side argues that this negative exception does not jus-tify Turkey's "arbitrary" action in fixing a boundary across the middle of the Aegean, violating the Continental Shelf of the Greek islands.

Turkey clearly takes the word "Continental" in its literal sense. She insists that the eastern Greek islands have no shelf but "rest" on the Anatolian Continental Shelf. In fact, a new variation is that the boundary should follow a line along the deepest points of the Aegean to delimit the submarine frontier between the continents of Europe and Asia.

For years Turkish diploma have taken pains to build up an international case in respect of islands hugging the coasts of foreign states. The thesis is that islands should qualify, not only for a Continental Shelf, but even for a territorial sea by virtue of size, population, proximity, and geographical formation. This campaign has been unsuccessful, but it will be raised again at the third United Nations, conference on the law Nations conference on the law of the sea to be held in Caracas between June 20 and August 29.

Guarantee of free navigation

Turkey's vigorous pressure on Greece to agree to early negotiations for the delimita-tion of the Continental Shelf is clearly prompted by fears that conditions worldwide are now ripe for a universal acceptance of the 12-mile territorial sea limit. Greece could easily extend her territorial waters from the present six to 12 miles and thus block Turkey's claims to a Shelf. Since few of the Aegean islands are more than 24 miles apart, Turkey's case would, as one Greek diplomat put it, "crumble on a some of Greek territorial sover-eignty", from Lesbos to crumble on a solid wall

Such a move, of course, would vex both the Soviet Union and the United States who loathe closed seas or straits and who make extensive use of the Aegean to spy on each other. Greece would therefore be likely to combine such extension with a declaration guaranteeing free navigation in the outer six miles of this sovereign zone.

The Greek regime is aware that Turkey's interest in off-shore Aegean oil is only secondary to her political aims. The dispute promises to take its place with the other two perennial Greek-Turkish differ-ences: Cyprus and the minorithe Conservatives may choose to look just new, the Labour Government has the tactical, if not necessarily the strategical, advantage. This is obviously true in respect of the retreat (half-hearted through it may be) from the Tory incomes policy. be) from the Tory incomes policy, for instance, and also the dismantling of the Industrial Relations Actneither of which processes would the Conservative care to contest from their own present position in an early general election.

But there is one issue on which both the strategic and the tactical advantage (whether one sets sights on a point before or after the election) seem unequivocally to be with the present Government—and that is the EEC. This has been sharply underlined by Mr Callaghan's performance in Luxembourg on Tuesday and by the Conservative reaction to it. But there is one issue on which both

In the days when the Labour Party was bitterly divided on Mr Heath's proposal to enter the Community, the term "renegotiation" was adopted to mean all things to all Labour men. It was a concept behind which all the conflicting Labour wings could unite—those who were prepared to go in on Mr Heath's terms, those who on Mr Heatry on any terms, and the men in the middle (Mr Wilson and Mr Callaghan among them) whose main concern was party unity.

At that time, the party leadership was only too happy if anyone chose to read "renegotiation" as meaning "reopening the treaty" and that remained the situation up to and including Mr Callaghan's truculent address to the Community on April 1, with its clear message that, if not satisfied, Britain would get out. Since last Tuesday, however, there is no longer room for anyone to suppose that Britain either wants to reopen the treaty or to get out, provided the the treaty or to get out, provided the Labour Government gets what it regards as a reasonable deal. And so sharp was the change of tone between April 1 and June 4 that it might be tempting to suppose that the Government, in some mysterious way, had been educated to new attitudes on Europe by the facts of office-holding between those two dates.

However, that would be a misreading of the situation. Of course, the Government has no doubt been educated by office-holding to the problems of pulling out. But if one distinguishes the tone from the content of the two utterances, the statement of April 1 and that of June 4 complement rather than contradict each other. On April 1 Mr Callaghan was concerned to convey to the EEC and to his own party that the Government had meant what it said in its manifesto and would pull out if it could not achieve a satisfactory "renegotiation".

The statement of June 4 was meant to show that what it wanted to achieve by negotiation, though important for Britain, would neither disturb the fundamental structure of the Community nor reopen the Treaty. Yet it is not a negligible thing that the Government is pursuing, particularly in asking for Britain's contribution to the European Budget to be examined. ined, in the context of others, with a view to its reduction. Similarly, though the other changes sought can be discussed in the context of the Community's ordinary business, they are not insignificant.

Ronald Butt

If, for example, the Government is able to secure a provision that the Community's regional policy does not inhibit the British Government's right to make what special provisions it thinks necessary for its own regions, that could be interpreted as a gain for United Kingdom sovereignty. An agreement on some differential price arrangements, under the agricultural agrangements under the agricultural policy to prevent price distortions in Britain could be seen in something of the same light.

However if none of the tangible proposals of the June 4 statement were at odds with the April 1 state ment, it is also true that the June 4 statement, for all its constructiveness, does not contradict the message of April 1 that the British Government would be prepared to quit if its minimum needs cannot be met.

Indeed, if Mr Wilson and Mr Callaghan were not prepared to stick it out at least to this extent, it is doubt-ful how far they could hold the strong anti-EEC element in their own ranks and in Parliament. Mr Wilson might, perhaps, be willing to try to weather a parliamentary storm by Labour and-Marketeers, if he went "soft" on Marketeers, if he went "soft" on Europe, since he could expect much more compensating Tory support than the amount of Lahour support that Mr Heath received from Mr Jenkins and the Lahour pro-Marketeers, when the decision "in principle" was taken in the last Parliament. But it is much more doubtful whether the Government could survive the likely departure to the backbenches of, say, Mr such carcumstances.

The internal state of the Labour Party on this issue is, of course also a powerful influence on the response of the Conservative leadership, which is to do, and say, nothing that would make the position adopted by Mr Callagian more difficult visa-vis the anti-EEC Labour left. Taking Britain into the EEC is now the one great surviving contribution to politics of the Conservative Government of 1970-74 and Mr Heath will not at all be inclined to jeopardize it by stirring up trouble for the Labour Party on the issue while it is in the balance. Here we come back to the point, that, on whatever time scale the future is probed, the EEC is at least one issue which seems likely to benefit Labour. Whether the Government recommends that Britain should stay in or go out, it is a clear electoral of the Conservative leadership, which in or go out, it is a clear electoral advantage for Labour that it is willing to put the issue to a popular verdict. Mr Wilson has made it clear that Mr Wilson has made it clear that this is more likely to be done by a referendum than by a general election. This decision seems to have been based on his belief (at the time he said it) that the next election would probably be this October and is not likely to be later than February. It is certain that a renegotiation could not be concluded by October, and probably not by February, so that (assuming these as the election dates) it would hardly be feasible to subject the country to yet another election soon country to yet another election soon afterwards simply on the ERC question. Even if there were no election before next May, the renegotiation might not well be concluded in time. Hence the recourse to a referendum-the very prospect of which is an

The brewery company decided not to continue using it but, because the building is "listed" as of special architectural and historic importance, did not contemplate demolition. They offered it to the local council for a nominal the local council for a nominal £100, for conversion into a much-needed public hall.

The proposal provoked considerable opposition in the town.
The building was unsuitable, it was argued, and could be no substitute for a purpose-built hall. Some townsfolk, blind to the importance of the maltings as a backdrop to Ely's riverside moorings and its bishop's park, said the sooner the old ruin was pulled down, the better.

Happily, the then local council (the City of Ely Urban District) thought otherwise. Architects and engineers Arup Asso-ciates examined the building and advised that it could be satisfactorily and economically converted; Whitehall was per-suaded, in the combined interests of providing a hall, preserving the townscape and finding a use for a statutorily protected building, to give loan sanction for the work; and local architect, D. A. Adams & Associates, drew up plans.

The architect removed the first and second floors from the greater part of the building, keeping and strengthening the fine timber roof. He then added a single storey extension at the back of the building, with a short river-facing facade skilfully knitted in to the existing structure, and carved out of the whole a main hall seating 300. a conference room for 130, and

The total cost of £94,000—met with help from the county council—is less than comparable accommodation would have cost new. The new Parish Centre at Warsop, Notts, is a similar case from among the nine "private sector" entries short-listed. The church at Warsop stands apart from the main centre of the town, with an inadequate and ogly corrugated mission hall serving church and many social activities there. When the mission site became ear-marked for redevelopment the parochial church council at first thought in terms of a new building adjoining the church. But close by stood a group of redundant farm buildings a medieval manor house, a barn with a fine seventeenth-century roof, and a linking granary block round three sides of a courtyard. All were listed, but lacked a use and had become

The owners, who were sympa thetic to preservation of the buildings as well as the church's need, sold it to the parochial church council for a nominal £100. Volunteers worked to clear debris, a local builder gave his firm's services for the later stages of the conversion, and again the result is a parish centre with far more attractive and ample facilities than could been provided in a new building. The "Tudor Barn" is a splendid hall for larger function fine timber roof now splendidly revealed; its excessive length reduced visually by the installa-tion of a gallery ingeniously fronted by sections of redundant Victorian choic stall from the church. The converted building also contains a variety of meet-ing rooms, lounges, a licensed club, and kitchens and cloakrooms as well as a flat for the resident caretaker. A detached modern stable block houses the sometimes noisy activities of the youth club. Total cost of the conversion was £25,000.

The architects have suited the conversion to the spaces in the building, provid-ing what are often tall, studiolike rooms with high windows and sloping ceilings showing the original beams. The 11 flats intended for sale are grouped round one courtyard, and the pub, restaurant and two staff flats around another pleasingly paved in the same red brick. The kiln with its distinctive chimney now houses the pub's main bar and wine bar for the upstairs Three other entries discussed in this arricle have produced homes out of buildings which seemed to most observers suitable only for demolition. slate roof on seven great timber crucks. It is a listed building but, when Liverpool architect and university lecturer David Brock took it on, was derelict and overgrown. Out of it he has created a spacious house for himself and his family and a smaller home for his parents in law. The result is an immensely attractive and very personal home at the remarkably low net cost of £5 per sq ft; an interest-ing and historic building preserved; and a visual asset to a suburban environment.

The Jacobean House at Burton Latimer in Northants was, before Kettering surveyors and archi-tects Gotch & Surridge took it on, a hotch-potch of derelict school buildings, the original seventeenth century house almost submerged by ad hoc Victorian additions. The approach was one of "careful and selective demolition" of most of the Victorian additions, leaving the front Jacobean block revealed and the best of the Victorian earlier. The grange, built of front Jacobean block revealed pink local sandstone, carries its and the best of the Victorian

The problem of school windows so high that you could not see out of them was solved by raising the floor level in most of the front part of the house; and the designer of the conversion took care in siting dividing walls to reveal sifing dividing walls to reveal the fine wooden roof trusses In contrast to these two elegant single family homes, is Norwich City Council's Calvert

Street gateway in the Colegate area of the city across the River Wensum. Like the Jacobean house at Burton Latimer, this was a case of old buildings in a precarious state owned by a small charity unable to afford their restoration. The answer lay in purchase by an enlightened local authority already seeking to reinvigorate an historic but down-at-heel area both by preservation and conversion of individual build-ings, and by redevelopment with new bousing of a character and scale to enhance the established townscape.

The circumstances here underline the message that merely restoring old buildings is not enough. Behind Calvert Street was a transport depot. As long as it remained there, the lorry traffic would have ritiated restoration work. The city bought the site fer houswhere, and has now restored the two elegant eighteenth-century buildings entered for awards and converted them into eight flats at annual rents ranging from £270 to £426.

Finally two cases where public authorities have preserved statutorily listed buildings while adapting them for their own use to provide satisfactory working conditions for their staff. The Post Office at Saffron Walden, Essex, was a striking Georgian town house hope-lessly inadequate as the main post office of the town and seppost office of the cown and separated by the length of its high street from an equally masatisfactory sorting office. My own garden, though reasonable by London standards, cannot accommodate all the sweet corn, artichokes, sugar peas, courgettes, scorzonera and the rest which I am anxious to

My first move was to tele-phone the Parks Department of Lambeth Borough Council, where I received the shortest of shrift. There was, I was told, a waiting list of 150. I am easily discouraged and let my plan lay fallow, turning to wine-making instead. But my interest in allotments was freshly sparked by reading the written reply to a question asked in the Greater London Council on May 14. In it, the chairman of the Housing Management Committee revealed that there are 1.312 allotments managed directly by the GLC. My wife then began tracking down who in the GLC had charge of the allotments. She was first referred to the Valuation and Estates Department in Ealing, where a man confessed slightly ashamedly that he ran only three single allotments in Greenwich Bexley and Lewisham, and all were occupied. He suggested ringing the Housing Depart-

With the fever really on me now I would not be so easily deterred, so, shamelessly deciding to exploit my rank as the most influential journalist in most influential journalist in Europe (pace Lord Longford), I telephoned the GLC Press

Through them, I was put in touch with the supremo of all GLC allotments, whose name I dare not reveal here. He said it was difficult, but spoke moder ately encouragingly of possibili-ties in Tulse Hill. A week later an aide phoned back to say Tulse Hill was out, although I could have something in Rochampton, which is too far. I was almost on the point of

First and foremost, this year's spring wage negotiations have led to boosts in basic wage packets averaging 32 per cent in major industries throughout Japan, and these higher costs have yet to show up in the price indices. ritish ears Mr morning. For when he told the Giscard Estaing's "Yes But. French National Assembly that " Britain now is demanding modipositive, and the ficutions to the Treaty", he was saying something that is actually not true, as Mr Callaghan had been at some pains to make clear.
But this error does at least give some grounds for hope that his statements were based on a misunderstanding, whether wilful or otherwise. If France is taking her stand on the Treaties, and Britain is seeking a solution within the terms of the Treaties, then the prospects of a success-ful renegotiation may not be so remote as M Chirac suggested. This was at least hinted by M. Sauvaguargues when he told the cabinet meeting that "any solution to problems of British membership must be under the existing texts".

Probably M Chirac's harsh tone was motivated by two unvoiced considerations. The first was the thought that in the coming renegotiation French interests would have to be defended, and that therefore as strong as possible an initial-bargaining position should be taken up. If this is right it is actually encouraging insanuch as it implies that France takes the prospect of renegotiation seriously.

The second was the context in which he was speaking: a policy statement to be followed by a vote of confidence, in which the 180 votes of the Gaullist parliamentary group will be decisive. Those votes are an essential part of President Giscard d'Estaing's new presidential majority", but they cannot absolutely be taken for granted. Many Gaullists regard both President and Prime Minister as little better than traitors to the Gaullist cause. Their proclaimed attitude to the meeting yesterday new government (echoing M European Commission.

to General de Caulle in 1967) is Yes, if. "They have not been much placated by the composition of M. Chirac's government, in which their party has only five members (including Mosts himself) while four posts have gone to their arch enemies, the Reformateurs.

To reassure the disgruntled Gaullists was therefore M Chirac's most immediate task. He sought to do so by laying considerable emphasis on France's national independence, and the virtues of General de Gaulle's foreign policy, although admiring the need for active and friendly cooperation with the United States". He also sought to do it by echoing the themes of M Chaban-Delmas's inaugural speech as Prime Ministra and the med to ter five years ago: the need to reform "a society still caught up in rigid stratifications caused by caste spirit and the weight of bureaucracy", and the need for cooperation "between all the actors of economic and social life". These are themes which it will be hard for M Chaban-Delmas's disappointed supporters to vote against today. No doubt the same consideration helped to add firmness to M Chirac's remarks about possible concessions to Britain.

Of course those remarks represent a facet of French policy which it would be wrong to neglect, especially as a similar firmness was shown by M Sauvagnargues in his speech to the Council of Ministers. Yet it must be significant that after making that speech, and after telephoning to the Elysée, M Sauvagnargues did not oppose the referal of Mr Callaghan's proposals to the the Department of controversy over selection is of trusted, for reasons both good and limited relevance. If it is too simple to allege that there is a direct causal link between the spread of the comprehensive school in London and the simul-taneous spread of indiscipline, troancy and vandalism, there is at least as much truth in that association as there is in Mr Ashley Bramall's claim on Tuesday that the end of selection would bring a beneficial "total transformation" to the comprehensives.

It is probably true that the pupils that London's state schools have to cope with are on average considering reestables able than those outside the asselves as independent capital, as well as more disrag their feet in the Parily this is because the area's private schools and numerous surviving grammar schools do take many of the most able. But unless the comprehensives that replace them can offer a reasonably comparable standard of schooling, then the abolition of granmar schools is more likely to feed the private sector and accelerate the flight of the middle classes from inner London than to fill the big schools with brighter, keener pupils, as Mr Bramall implies.

The truth is that London com-bad. They are so large that they tend to acquire a demoralizing impersonality, unless their staff are of an unusually high calibre. The stresses of working with deprived children are such that the teachers are, on the contrary, very often novices far out of their depth. In a large and unselective school a minority of wild pupils can cause much wider disruption than they would have done in an old secondary modern. Many parents feel that the prevailing attitude to learning is not sufficiently urgent or competitive.

To some extent, however, the system takes the blame for social problems that would exist how-ever the schools were organized. One or two of London's comprehensives cannot fairly be accused of any of these shortcomings (unluckily for egalitarian motives. however, they tend to be situated in the more prosperous areas). At a time when parents are deeply concerned about the quality of their children's schools and sceptical about current educational fashions, the ILEA is unwise to make extravagant promises for a reorganization which, on past form, is likely, if anything, to do more harm than denied absurd That this remains true is emphatan the Soviet Union sized by the new agreement under which Japan will provide equipment for the Siberian coal fields in return for more than 100 million tons of coal over twenty years. It would, however, be understandable if the Soviet Union were doing some rethinking on the extent to which it wants to commit itself to agree ments of this sort.

Mr Brezhnev's policy was formulated before last year's war in the Middle East made everyone aware of the real value of oil. The Soviet Union produced 421 million tons of oil in 1973 and expects to produce about 500 million in 1975. It is on the verge of being unable to meet its own requirements together with those of Eastern Europe, which imports 80 per cent of its oil from the Soviet Union. Soviet experts have predicted a significant shortage in about five years' time,

The problem is not resources, which are vast, but the technology for exploiting them and the pipelines for transporting the product. The Russians cannot drill as deep or as fast as the Americans, especially ofishore, where their experience has been mainly in the relatively shallow waters of the Caspian. Undoubtedly they are capable of developing their technology, but they have to decide whether to wait while they do so or to take a short cut by buying more foreign equipment. If they wait they risk shortages for themselves and strains in Eastern Europe. If they buy foreign equipment they must pay for it in hard currency or in oil which they need themselves. They must also allow more and more foreigners to come and poke around in their remoter regions.

It is a difficult choice with political dimensions which are not new in Russian history. Dr kharov, the dissident nuclear scientist, hinted at these in May in his lengthy reply to Solzhenitsyn's prescription for the salvation of Russia. He wrote: "Among a large part of the Russian people and among part of the leaders of the country there exist attitudes of great Russian nationalism, combined with a fear of becoming too dependent on the West and a fear of democratic changes. Solzhenitsyn's errors could well become dangerous if they fell upon such rich soil."

If one adds together Mr Shashin's suggestion that foreign help is not so vital after all, and the increasingly tough remarks of Marshal Grechko, the Defence Minister, on the need for military preparedness, it is impossible to escape the impression that while there is no basic change of policy in Moscow there is a change of tone in the way it is discussed and possibly in the balance of forces which conduct the discussion.

Concorde as a competitor

From Sir. William Hildred Sir, The accidental confrontation of view expressed on contiguous pages of The Times (June 4) by Bernard Levin and Sir Peter Masefield on the subject of Concorde demands Levin and Sir Peter Masefield on the subject of Concorde demands that anyone even on the sidelines should stand up and be counted. I admire both these gentlemen. I also admire Sir George Edwardes, OM, who built the aeroplane in conjunction with a tremendous French team and with personnel supremely skilled at the growing point of technology in avious.

With some knowledge also of the hundred-odd presidents of the airlines in the International Air Transport Association I can testify to their intense spirit of competitiveness, and recollect the Duary when Juan Trippe of Pan American Airways amounced at an annual general meeting that he had ordered 35 jets and how many of them scraped the barrel to follow suit.

Even allowing for the Russian SST, this country holds the lead in technical inventiveness and perseverance. And once the first Concorde carries passengers to Australia in a matter of hours, the rest of the leading airlines will follow on.

I cannot mink Bernard Levin is right in saying it will require hundreds of millions of further moneys to establish Concorde as a suitable passenger aeroplane. But even if it did the money will go into the pockets of the most highly skilled workers in the country and that is not an unworthy object. Yours faithfully,

Laying a wreath From Mr W. R. J. Pullen

Sir, On one particular point in his letter today (May 30) Mr Eric Shipton has been misinformed, and it may be helpful to state what actually happened with regard to the wreath-laying at Lord Cochrane's grave in Westmainster Abbey.

By a unanimous corporate decision of the Dean and Chapter on February 12, confirmed on February 26, it was agreed that in the circumstances there could be no official participation by them in the wreath-laying caremona and have 21 wreath-laying ceremony on May 21 this year. But there was not then, nor has there been since, any question of forbidding any individuals.

The Chilean Ambassador was, in fact, subsequently invited to lay a wreath if he wished, but preferred not to do so. Four wreaths were laid by various groups on the day in Yours faithfully,

Legal dilemma of an unknown tax

From Mr C. G. Prestige

Sir, Your leading article "The Effects of an Unknown Tax" (June 4) is timely. Solicitors, whose duty it is to advise members of the public on a large variety of matters-often matters which can have no connection with gifts or wealth within the ordinary meaning of those terms-are finding it increasingly difficult to know what advice to give to their

The problem is not confined to the proposed gifts cax. For example, on December 17, 1973, the then Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that the Government proposed to intro-duce legislation to alter the basis on which tax is charged on the disposal of land with development value. A press release from the Inland Rev-enue gave general details, but in some respects the release was vague: paragraph 19, for example, referred to "special provisions" (unspecified) "for certain interests in trusts". How can one advise in the face of such imprecision?

When the Finance Bill was at

When the Finance Bill was at length published at the end of April 1974, it was the view of many that the effect of clause 32 would be considerably wider than could reasonably be gleaned from the press release of December 1973; nevertheless the provisions now proposed are to apply retrospectively "to any disposal of any interest in land which is made after 17th December 1973".

The problem of what advice to give in connection with many "ordinary" Ine problem of what advice to give in connection with many, "ordinary" transactions grows daily. The problem is far more reaching than the example you, Sir, instanced of some lawyers being reluctant to allow a husband to put the family house into joint ownership.

What advice does one give to a client contemplating taking out additional life assurance: will that be an asset liable to the wealth tax? and if so, at what rate? What advice does one give if it is desired to use capital in a family trust to pay debts: for the Einencial Secretary to the for the Financial Secretary to the Treasury said in Parliament on March 28 (Hansard, column 758) that the gifts tax will apply "at progressive rates" (the rates themselves being unspecified) "on all capital taken out of a settlement"? What advice does one give if a client wishes to make permanent financial provision for an elderly but impoverished relative: does the client do nothing for fear that any step taken might make him liable to gifts tax? What advice does one give to a ckient who desires to make a new Holborn Law Society represents some 1,500 solicitors in the Lincoln's Inn, Gray's Inn and Bedford Row areas of London; its members have collectively considerable expertise in the field of tax law and in advising on financial matters generally.

The Committee of Holborn Law Society urge that it is one thing to introduce a change in the rates at which an existing tax is levied (such as in the levels of income tax, stamp as in the levels of income tax, stamp duty or estate duty) and for the legislation, when finally enacted, to be retrospective to the date when the change was announced. But if new taxes are to be introduced, then the tax should not come into force at an earlier date than the publication of the Finance Bill or at very least the publication of comprehensive draft clauses (to be included in a later Bill) spelling out precisely the scope of the proposed tax.

of the proposed tax. The public is entitled to certainty in the law. Yours faithfully,

From Lord Luke of Pavenham Sir, I am glad to read your leader on the effects of an unknown tax if only

Ulster: re-drawing the boundaries

From Mr Brian O'Hanlon

Sir, The tragedy of Northern Ireland should not surprise anyone. The seeds of today's holocaust were sown 50 years ago with the setting up of a Protestant enclave in the six North Eastern counties to offset de Valera's Catholic Socialist Republic in the

One may or may not like Ian Paisley's brand of Protestantism. That is not the point. The unsurmountable fact is that he speaks for the majority feeling in the Six Counties and never in a million light years will he, William Craig and/or the Rev Martin Smyth's Orange Order see the "loyalist" Presby-terian status quo changed.

Britain's mistakes were indeed many. However, no successive British Ministers could have done James Callaghan and William White-law, in the immediate past.

The fact ought now to be faced. The Six Counties must become an independent State, fully self-governing. Britain should begin a phased withdrawal as soon as possible and set a final time limit. Negotiations could, in the interim, begin between the powers that are in the Six Counties and the Dublin Government for a possible re-drawing of the boundaries—Derry, as William Craig has already said, might go into the Republic—and the resettlement of Catholic families who do not wish to live under the Protestant Ulster "Bed Hand" in the South Red Hand" in the South. The Briton of today is different from his predecessor of half a century ago. In those days, and indeed up until 10 years ago, it would have been unthinkable for part of the "Empire" and "Britain" to be torn as under from the metropolitan mainland. This continues has torn asunder from the metropolitan mainland. This sentiment no longer applies. The common view prevailing seems to me to be that Ulster's problems can only be sorted out by Ulstermen and that most people here on the mainland could not accede to the rigid Protestant ascendancy and its total inflexibility that any pacification of the "loyalist" majority would mean, inside the ist " majority would mean, inside the United Kingdom context.

It is by no means "obvious" that a civil war would follow a British withdrawal just as it is in many ways a nonsense to telk about the "reunifi-cation" of Ireland. The Ulster Workers Committee have recently demonstrated just how effective the majority in the Six Counties can be when they coordinate their resources.

Indeed, the Ulsterman is perhaps the most resourceful and diligent creature on these islands. Ireland has always been united in so many ways, in commerce, industry and sport, that its many facets of unity have been ignored due to the obviously over-riding political differ-

Let us, Sir, stop shillyshallying about withdrawing troops or not withdrawing them. The debate should be centred around an independent Protestant pocket state and in everyone's interests, not least the bard pressed British raxpayer, it should begin at once.

Yours faithfully, BRIAN O'HANLON, 1 Kensington Mansions, Trebovir Road, SW5.

From Mr S. G. Banks Sir, The decision of the Home Secre tary to refuse the transfer of the Price sisters to an Ulster prison is both strange and regrestable. Strange in that Mr Jenkins has previously been noted for his humanitarian views-was he not an ardent campaigner for the release of Rudolf Hess from Spandau prison? Regrettable in that nothing can be achieved by allowing these two young women to kill themselves—but by allowing them to save themselves he will quite possibly save many (who knows how many) innocent lives. It is almost predictable that the mindless assassins on both sides in Ireland will in turn take revenge should these women die. Let Mr Jenkins ponder well the words of Shakespeare: "The quality of mercy is not strained, it droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven, upon the place beneath: it is twice blest, it blesseth him that gives, and him that takes . . .". Yours faithfully, S. G. BANKS. 65 Orchard Place, Harvington, Evesham, Worcestershire.

Freedom to listen

From Professor J. Black Sir, May I comment on the freedom of speech? The current discussion is neglecting the equally important freedom to listen.

If I speak, what I say may well in some people's opinion be trivial, ill-informed or antisocial. I need no audience to exercise my freedom to say it; this can be done in the privacy of my own bathroom. Suppose, however, that some individual or society actually wants to hear

They need not be assumed to agree with what I say, or with what they expect me to say. They may wish to confirm for themselves that anybody could be so stupid as to make the statements press reports have ascribed to me. They may want to hear me for themselves before finally deciding there is no merit in my case. They may hope by dis-cussion to convince me of the error of my views. They may merely hope for entertainment.

Whatever their reasons for wanting to hear me, if they are not allowed to their freedom is being curtailed as well as mine. It is surely the duty of university authorities to ensure that any of their staff or students who want to listen to any speaker whose utterances are not actually illegal should be allowed to hear them in peace. This is not for the sake of the speaker, whose views will usually ger vast free publicity from being shouted down when they would have passed with our notice if heard. It is to protect the freedom of the would be audience.

Anybody who does not like my views can safeguard their purity by staying away when I speak. They have no right to stop others from listening, and they have no business to be in a university if they try. Yours sincerely, J. BLACK, Streatham Court, Rennes Drive,

Arabs in Jerusalem From Mr Jamal Nasir

Sir, Mr Teddy Kollek's views on Jerusalem, as reported by your correspondent in your issue of May 31, are not only sad but insulting, as well as disappointing, and completely out of place at this particular time.

Mr Kollek and the rest of the Israeli leaders should know by now that the millions of Arabs and Muslims will never rest until Arab Jerusalem, which had always been in Arab hands prior to 1967, is returned to them. There can be no lasting peace in the Middle East unless Israel, first and foremost, withdraws from Arab Jerusalem. Mr Kollek. without the slightest hesitation, goes on to say "the Arabs in Jerusalem had everything except the right to be their own masters ".

Suffice it to say that the right to be masters in one's own country is, to the Arabs and to millions of men and women throughout the world, more important than life itsel! For Mr Kollek to say that the Arabs in Jerusalem were occupied by "the Bedu from Jordan" is a most ridiculous statement. Yours faithfully, IAMAL NASIR, Former Minister of Instice of lordan. 2 Stone Buildings Lincoln's Inn. WC2.

Sale of church

treasures From the Registrar of the Province of Canterbury

Sir, On May 21 you published a letter from the President of the Society of Antiquaries of London, and nine other gentlemen distinguished in the world of museums, attacking the whole basis of the system under which the Ecclesiastical Courts control and protect churches and their contents through the faculty jurisdiction. The General Synod has full power to legislate on this subject and will no doubt do so if any change is needed, show of the change is needed; short of that, procedural changes can be made by the Rule Committee under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964.

But the major premise of the letter is incorrect. The writers say that since the decision of the Court of Arches in the Tredington case in 1970 "an increasing amount of parish plate has been coming into the market". This is not true. The statistics kept by the Council for Places of Worship show that in the 20 years 1948 to 1967 inclusive, twenty-one faculties were granted for sales in such cases; in each of the years 1956 and 1959 there were four; in 1963 three; in 1965 two; and in all the others either one or none. There was a sharp increase after that: five in 1968, six in 1969 and eight in 1970.

The Tredington judgment was deligated each of the part of the council of the council of the council of the council of the part of the council of the years 1956 and 1959 there were four; in 1963 three; in 1965 two; and in all the others either one or none. There was a sharp increase after that: five in 1968, six in 1969 and eight in 1970.

and eight in 1970.

The Tredington judgment was delivered only at the end of 1970, on October 28, and it was not reported in the Weekly Law Reports until the spring of 1971. Thus its effect was only felt in and after 1971. In that year four such faculties were granted; in 1972 there were two; in 1973 there were two; and so far there has been one in 1974. The Tredington judgment, far from opening the gates to indiscriminate sales ing the gates to indiscriminate sales of parish plate, has laid down, with the authority of the appellate court, rules which make it very difficult to sell parish plate at all unless there is some compelling reason to do so, usually the urgent need to repair a church

Again, the writers of the letter describe the Chancellor of a Diocese, the judge of its Consistory Court, as "a single individual with almost despotic powers". The Chancellor is a Queen's judge, and like all other judges he is bound by pre-cedent and by the rules of his court. Almost all civil cases in the secular courts of England are tried by a single judge: all Chancery cases, all cases in the Family Division, nearly all those in the Queen's Bench Division, and all those in the County Courts are thus handled. In many of these cases (eg, concerning custody of children) the single judge is required to exercise a judicial discretion, just as the Chancellor exercises a judicial discretion in authorizing the sale of parish plate. But it is not usually suggested that the several judges eiting along have But it is not usually suggested that the secular judges sitting alone have "almost despotic powers". Why then should the ecclesiastical judges, performing similar duties under similar conditions, be thus stigmatized? Further, the Chancellor is a judge of first instance; thus all his decisions are subject to an appeal to the Court of the Province. Two appeals in cases about church plate have in fact been allowed by the Court of Arches in the last four the Court of Arches in the last four

No human arrangements are per fect, and there may well be a case for considering whether, on the rare occasions when church treasures are to be sold under the Tredington rules, the museums of this country shall be given an opportunity to bid for them, or possibly even in some circumstances the chance to pre-empt them at the fu'l market price but without an auction. This is a technical matter which the Rule Committee could properly be asked to consider.

But to call, as the writers of the letter do, for the total replacement of the faculty jurisdiction (in which the sale of church plate is only a very small part of the work) by some new system wholly unspecified is surely too sweeping. And it is also a pity that the dist aguished writers have made the major errors to which I have ventured to call your attention.

Yours faithfully, D. M. M. CAREY, Registrar, Province of Canterbury, 1 The Sanctuary, Westminster, SW1. June 4.

Animal cells and bacteria can respond to certain chemicals by moving towards them. How can the cell detect the source of the chemical and know in which direction to move? An answer has been found to the chemical and control of the chemical control of the che Leukocytes engulf and destroy bacteria after the bacteria have been immobilized by antibodies. Finding our how they know where you is therefore immortant for our

been immobilized by antibodies. Finding out how they know where to go is therefore important for our understanding of infection and immunity, and it may also provide clues to how embryos develop. In the process by which a spherical egg becomes a creature with legs and ears the organized movement of cells is very important.

There are two ways in which a cell could determine the source of a chemical signal. The so-called "sparial" mechanism involves the cell having detectors at different places on its surface. The cell would be able to compare the concentration of the chemical at those roins on its surface and thus decide which was closer to the source of the chemical. Alternatively a "temporal" mechanism may be used by a cell with only one receptor to be adequate the cell must have a memory that compares a previous concentration with the present one and thus tells the cell whether it is moving towards or away from the source of the signal.

aggregated antibodies. She placed the cells and the antibody on a small piece of glass and filmed the progress of the cells towards the antibody. She found that the cells moved very accurately towards the antibody; most of the time the direction they took was within 30° of the most direct path. The cells tended to move for a short distance in a straight line, then to change direction and move for a short distance in the new for a short distance in the new direction.

In the first experiment, Dr Zig

mond investigated in which direction the cells turned if they were moving at an angle greater than 30° from the most direct path to the source of the signal. If the mechanism was temporal, the cells would merely know they were cells would merely know they were getting closer to the signal all the time and they would not be aware that they were slightly off course; so the dear change of direction would be equally likely to be towards or away from the source of the signal. But if there was a spatial mechanism with more than two detectors, the cell would know precisely where the source of the signal was; if it was off course it would therefore be expected to change direction to the right course.

Or Zigmond found that 15 of 16 a memory that compares a previous concentration with the present one and thus tells the cell whether it is moving towards or away from the source of the signal.

Dr Sally Zigmond, of the Strangeways Research Laboratory, Cambridge, has investigated whether horse leukocytes use the spatial or the temporal mechasism when moving towards

Dr Zigmond found that 15 of 16 cells that were off course changed direction so that their path was closer to the direct one. That suggests that the cells detect the source of signals by a spatial enechanism and probably have at least three receptors. An alternative is that there is some complicated temporal system by which cells remember personance of the signal.

the chemical and the directions they had been taking. To eliminate that possibility Dr Zigmond investigated how sta-tionary cells respond to a new chemical signal. The cells had no chemical signal. The cells had no memory of previous concentration of the chemical, so if they moved by a temporal mechanism their initial movements would be expected to be in a random direction. But she found that 18 cells moved towards the signal and only two away, a result very unlikely to occur if the cells moved randomly. That strongly suggests that leukocytes move towards a signal by comparing the concentrations of a chemical at several points on their chemical at several points on their

Bacteria apparently use the other means of approaching a signal, the temporal mechanism. This difference between bacteria and leukocytes may be linked with their difference in size. Bacteria have a diameter only one twentieth the size of leukocytes. So a mchanism for detecting a concentration difference in a concentration difference and a concentration difference in a for detecting a concentration difference across such a small distance would have to be impossibly accurate.

Dr Zigmond's experiments were done on a very small scale: the leukocytes were less than an inch from the stimulant. So it is not possible to deduce that that is the means by which leukocytes find antibodies aggregated with bacteria in the body. But it should be possible to extend the experiments to find out what happens in real life. By Nature-Times News Service. Source: Nature, May 31, (249, 450;

Estate duty recoverable as damages

Before Mr. Instice O'Conno I jungment delivered May 22; admitted negligence resulted in the death.

His Lordship, in a reserved judgment, awarded £51,850 on a claim by the executors, the widow and son of Mr Denzil Davles, of St John's Wood, London, who was killed on June 10, 1971, while driving his car with his wife as a passenger, in a collision with a lorty owned by Whiteways Cyder Co Ltd and driven by Mr Frederick Bowier, of Telford, Shronshire.

Co Lid and driven by Mr Frederick Bowiey, of Telford, Shropshire. Mrs Davies's claim for personal injuries was settled on the admission of liability.

Mr Peter Pain, QC, and Mr James Mitchell for the plaintiffs; Mr John Wood, QC, and Mr David Smout for the defendants.

HIS LORDSHIP said that the only issue remaining was damages under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 1846 to 1959. Mr Davies had made gifts and dispositions not only to provide for his wife and son but also to reduce the amount of estate duty payable on his death. That result could be achieved only if the dispositions were made at least seven years before death.

Mr Davies died aged 55 within seven years and nearly £40,000 was brought back for estate duty. About £17,000 had been paid, the liability being than of the beneficiaries.

One major issue was whether the £17,000 was recoverable by reason

Davies v Whiteways Cyder Co of the Fatal Accidents Acts. Mr Ltd Wood submitted that it was not Wood submitted that it was not because the payment to the revenue was not "injury resulting from the death" within section 2 of the 1846 Act, since payment of estate duty could not be described as the loss of the expectancy of future pecuniary benefit from Mr Davies and, in any event, it was not a loss of benefit accruing from the relationship of husband and wife or father and son but solely from or father and son but solely from that of donor and donee.

The law on those topics was stated by Lord Justice Diplock in Malyon v Plummer ([1964] 1 OB 330, 348-349) where his Lordship referred with approval to the decision of Mr Justice Devlin in Burgess v Florence Nightingale Haspital for Gentlewomen ([1955] 1 OB 349), citing Sykes v North Eastern Railway Co ((1875) 44 LJCP 191) and Franklin v South Eastern Railway Co ((1858) 3 H & N 211). Burgess's case was still good law and could not support Mr Wood's submission. There were gifts to Mrs Davies not support Mr Wood's submission.

There were gifts to Mrs Davies valued at £15.322, on which £6,654 estate duty had to be paid. Mr Wood further submitted that once the gifts had been made the possible saving of estate duty, should Mr Davies have survived for seven years, could not be said to be a pecuniary benefit which accrued to her from Mr Davies.

At first sight that appeared an attractive argument, but on examination his Lordship was satisfied that it was wrong. The cases showed that it was wrong. The cases showed that the benefit which Mrs Davies must establish that she had lost was one which would have accrued to her from Mr Davies "if he had survived". The fact was that Mrs Davies had benefited to the extent of £8,668; had Mr Davies lived another 2½ years she would have benefited by a further £6,654.

The reality of such an arrangement was that a husband might say to his wife "I want to give you £15,000; I can only achieve this if I survive for seven years. I am making over to you £15,000 now, but for the next seven years it is worth only £9,000 to you because, should I die within that time, you will have to give £6,000 to the revenue. If I survive for seven years, then it is all yours."

There was nothing in section 2 of revenue. If I survive for seven years, then it is all yours."

There was nothing in section 2 of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, or in the cases, which had cut down the very wide words used and required his Lordship to hold that the £17,000 intended for Mr Davies's wife and child, but which as a result of his death had to be paid to the revenue, could not be recovered. On the contrary, to hold that it was recoverable seemed to his Lordship to be directly within the principle approved by Lord Wright in Davies v Powell Duffryn Associated Collieries Ltd [1942] AC 602, 611) and by Lord Reid in Taylor v O'Comor [1571] AC 115, 1271. If his Lordship was correct in holding that the £17,000 was a loss of benefit which would have accrued if Mr Davies had survived, it could not be suggested that it did not arise out of the relationship of husband and wife. Benefits reasonably anticipated did not cease to be recoverable. ably anticipated did not cease to be recoverable because they were voluntary.

A deduction of £500 had to be made from the £17,000 to allow for the chance that Mr Davies might not have survived for the remaining period, and the total damages eriod, and the total damage ould be assessed at £51,850. Solicitors: Nabarro, Nathanson (o ; Stanleys & Simpson North

State takes half share in machine tool group

By Edward Townsend

The Department of Industry has taken a 50 per cent share in a new holding company formed to comrol Kearney and Trecker Marwin, the Brighton machine tool makers.

The Government already has a 9.1 per cent stake in KTM held via the Department of Industry. While the Vickers option could reduce the Government's new 50 per cent holding at some later date, the Government still has at some stage to state its policy towards the public ownership of the United King-dom machine tool industry.

Once final terms have been agreed, it is understood that Vickers will supply at least half of KTM's main board directors although the local Brighton management will remain unchanged agement will remain unchanged.
The scheme also lays down form of preference shares in the holding company.

...KTM, which was formed last year by the merging with government assistance of the British subsidiary of Kearney and Trecker of Milwaukee in the United States with Marwin Machine Tools, has been regarded by the British Government as something of a "showpiece" in the British machine tool industry.

It is a leading manufacturer of technologically advanced numerically controlled milling machines and machining centres and important manufacturer of transfer machines for the motor industry.

The Department's statement last night stated that it, the ICFC and other shareholders have now decided that the company requires additional capital and the management resources of a powerful industrial group to enable it to realize its full potential.

"The provision of up to £3.5m additional working capital under the Industry Act testifies to the national importance of main-taining this important advanced sector of the machine tool industry as a supplier to British industry and to world export markets and as an employer of skilled workers."

However, it is thought that the Department of Industry was keen to supply the money only if a major industrial partner could be found.

Food retail groups offer deal on price controls

By Maurice Corina Industrial Editor

A price control deal on various foodstuffs has been offered to the Government by Britain's voluntary buying groups Mace, Spar Vivo, and VG, which supply 12,000 food shops.

They propose a six-month plan to impose maximum retail prices on basic commodities considered to be of overriding importance to people on lower incomes. They include bread, potatoes, cheese, powdered baby milks, chicken, lamb, butter, flour, sugar and beef.

The prices to be set will cover costs and yield a minimum net profit only. Further there will be price promotional activity on other goods, drawn from a line including the price promotional activity on the price production. from a list including eggs, sausages, tea, coffee, margarine, cooking fats, rice, and baby

Both the maximum prices and the selected "promoted" prices will be highly publicized, with posters in shops.

A spokesman for the leading buying groups said last night:

"The groups suggest that this package should constitute a voluntary agreement to last for six months, subject to contin-uing product and promotional support from their suppliers.

"In return, they have asked for an undertaking from the Government not to introduce any further legislation or take any other action on grocery prices and distributors' mar-

The offer comes after a series of meetings between the buying groups' executives and Mrs Shirley Williams, Secretary of State for Prices and Consumer Protection, as well as with various trade associations.

Clearly, the Government will be pleased at this attempt to hold down food prices. But it was pointed out last night that many of the retailers who would be involved do not have turnovers covered by the Government's request for a 10 per cent cut in gross profit refer-ence levels.

Talks today on future of Wilstar

By John Plender

Representatives of the principal bankers of Wilstar Securities, the parent company of Mr William Stern's private financial and cial and property interests, will attend a formal meeting today to consider the future of the company.

They are expected to decide whether the liquidation of the non-trading parent company, but not the operating subsi-diaries, would help solve the group's cash problems.

This follows the formation of a committee of bankers in May under the chairmanship of Mr Kenneth Cork, a City account-ant, to discuss with Wilstar a scheme for the orderly realiza-tion of group assets. All the big four clearing banks are involved with the group.

A number of secondary and overseas banks, as well as the Crown Agents and leading investment institutions, have advanced money to subsidiaries of the group which owned no the group, which owned pro-perty assets valued at well over £100m last June.
A transfer of some of the group's operations to an administrator acting for creditors, a solution recently adopted under Mr Cork at the troubled Lyon Group, is believed to be one of Bank chief backs | Barclays tests the possibilities under discussion.

Talks also continued yesterday between leading property groups over assistance for developers urgently needing financial support. Members of the commercial property committee of the National Associa-tion of Property Owners (NAPO) are considering aid for a number of groups, including the quoted Guardian Properties which admitted to liquidity difficulties in March. Mr Peter Anker, managing director of MEPC, said yesterday that members of the committee had not yet reached any decisions.

It is widely assumed in the City that the Bank of England city that the Bank of England is keen to encourage this kind of support. Last night, however, a spokesman for the Bank confined himself to saying that the Bank was anxious that property company collapses should be avoided.

Some members of the NAPO committee are believed to oppose the principle of property. companies assuming responsi bility for the borrowings of other companies in trouble. They consider that this could compound the liquidity troubles in property.

SD flexibility

Mr Gordon Richardson, the Governor of the Bank of England, last night defended the recently introduced arrange-ments of supplementary Special Deposits.

Mr Richardson was speaking at the annual conference of the Trustee Savings Banks' Associa-tion in Eastbourne. He admitted that supplementary Special Deposits could be regarded as a corset for the banking industry but added that the advantages of the new arrangements were

BUYS AMERICAN

The investment policy set out in our last Annual Report was maintained in the first four months of this year.

We continued to add to our American portfolio, considering that the successive falls in the value of the dollar have strengthened America's competitive position. Moreover, for some time to come the U.S.A. will be much better placed for energy supplies than

Apart from these purely economic factors, our preference for the United States is also based on more general considerations.

EFFICIENT ECONOMIC ORGANISATION

We have the impression that the American public thinks more of high marks for "satisfying consumer needs" than the European. Attaching proper value to efficient economic organisation and giving pride of place to the best economic leaders cannot in the end fail to produce its effect.

Besides these basic factors, other influences are making themselves felt in the shorter term. Just now the depressing factor is interest, whipped up as it is both by the high rate of economic activity and by inflation. The moment inflation is pushed back and loses its grip on interest rates, share prices on the New York Stock Market can begin to reflect the basically favourable factors. Anticipating this development we have increased our American investments by more than 170 million guilders.

EUROPEAN PORTFOLIO LITTLE CHANGED

In the first four months of this year our European portfolio has undergone only moderate changes. Availing ourselves of improving share prices we slightly reduced our holding in Datch local stocks. In Japan, too, we have taken a profit on some holdings in an advancing market.

'Return bottles' appeal as supplies are cut

By Business News Staff Large-scale public cooperation in returning glass bottles has been called for by the soft drinks industry because of the big cutback in production being implemented this week by glass container manufacturers.

The country's big dairies also are increasingly concerned that the supply of milk bottles could begin to slow down next week and the Dairy Trade Federation last night stressed the need for milk bottles to be returned.

The glass makers are being forced to cut output by 50 per cent because of a corresponding drop in supplies of soda ash from the dispute-hit ICI plant in Cheshire. Weekly production losses of up to 35 million containers are almost certain to occur next week. A spokesman for Unigate, one of Britain's biggest dairy concerns, said that appeals to the public to return milk bottles had resulted in an improvement of up to 50 per cent. Soft drink manufacturers, building up to their peak bottling period to meet high summer sales, expressed concern. Howwhich will be distributed throughout the development development areas.

Slump talk described as nonsense

By Melvyn Westlake

The talk frequently heard about the likelihood of a major economic slump was described in as "dangerous nonsense" last Mr Joel Barnett, the night by Mr Joel Barnett, the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, addressing the annual dinner of the annual dinner of the Equipment Leasing Association in London.

Choosing to adopt an optimistic tone. Mr Barnett said he be-lieved the present fears about reduced company liquidity were reduced company industry were greatly exaggerated reminding his audience of the Chancellor's statements about the availability of bank funds.

The fact was, Mr Barnett said, that late last year the gross liquid assets of industrial and commercial companies were over £10,000m. The three-day week was less damaging than feared, so that in all probability a substantial liquidity cushion was still available for use. Obviously, there had been some rise in bank borrowing, but nothing at all resembling a crisis, Mr Barnett said.

The Government's policy was move away from very high interest rates Mr Barnett was also hopeful about inflation. He noted that metal prices had fallen signifi-cantly during May. Food manufacturing import prices had fallen by more than 4 per cent. and subsidies already in operation would recipe the rise in the

The general feeling was that greater responsibility by banks is needed, not more controls. "The framework of the market itself is good", said Mr Walter Wriston, chairman of the First National City Bank.

A strong plea was made by numerals bankers for greater international harmonization of regulations governing banks. Mr Wriston noted that the fact that foreign banks could open branches in more than one state here, while domestic banks can not, was a positive development that may lead the United States authorities to become more liberal on the one-state banking "Substantial growth in overall pre-tax profit" reports Mr. F.R.D. Holland, Chairman.

- Operating profit rose by 41.2% to £2.79 million and pre-tax profit was 30.7% ahead at an all time record of £2.95 million. Regrettably substantially higher taxation has caused retained earnings to remain almost unchanged.
- A final dividend of 5.209p making a gross dividend equivalent of 11.025p (1973 10.5p) is the maximum permitted. Shareholders can elect to receive an allotment of shares in lieu of dividend, in addition a one for three bonus issue is recommended.
- The very substantial increase in profitability of the broking division arises from planned expansion, especially in areas overseas where the company was not previously strongly involved. Experience gained encourages us to believe that we can continue to expand at the present rate for the immediate future.
- For the first time the largest portion of our insurance Broking profit arose from business emanating from outside the U.K. and North America.
- Progress has been made in Australia and South Africa; opportunities for expansion in the EEC
- Profits from our Lloyd's Underwriting activities for the 1971 account showed a satisfactory increase, and present indications are that the 1972 account should also prove satisfactory.

Bullish about Wall Street

As an exercise in timing the buying out by Robeco in Feb-ruary of Utilico, a fund invested in United States utilities, could hardly have been bettered considering the problems now be setting the power utilities: For all that, the key to Robeco's current investment philosophy re-mains a fundamental bullishness about American markets. At the beginning of last year, the United States accounted for the United States accounted for some 37 per cent of Robeco's portfolio but by August the percentage had dropped to 25 and the fund as a whole was becoming more liquid. By the year end, however, it was moving back into the United States which then took up 28 per cent of the rotal portfolio, and this year, although the overall percentage remains about the same. centage remains about the same it has again been a huyer of American stocks. The approach there has been broadly based with food, remiling and chemical stocks being bought as well as oil majors like Exxon and Continental Oil.

Not, perhaps, a policy to have produced much tangible reward yet, although the asset value of Fl 186 a share on May 1 represented a fall of only 5 per cent in the first four months of this year. But there has clearly year. But there has clearly been much to be said for the been much to be said for the utilities liquidation and the selloff in the Japanese part of the portfolio. From accounting for 171 per cent of the fund or sume FI 708m at the beginning of 1973, progressive profit-taking has brought the Japanese holding down to 121 per cent with a worth of FI 448m. P & O's profits for the six months to March 31 are plainly way ahead of most stock markst forecasts. Should car men follow Volvo's lead?

Most motor manufacturers I have talked to admit that the Kalmar project could be the forerunner of a new generation of car plants which will result from growing pressure for better working conditions. But they add in some haste: "We pray that we are not the first to have to build a major car plant without an assembly track. That would give our competitors a cost advantage we could ill afford. It is equally true that they would have to follow our lead at some time in the future but meanwhile they would have but meanwhile they would have taken some of our markets and learnt from our mistakes." At Kalmar this week I met and talked to Signor Umberto Angelli, managing director of Fiat. Unlike other motor executives, he does not accept that this is a Swedish solution to a Swedish problem—how do you keep the world's most educated labour force content with menial assembly track work when Swedish workers can stay at home and receive as much in state payment as they do in wages?

Signor Agnelli is also the first of the industry's senior statesmen to put a cost figure on group assembly. He told me: "Volvo's problems now could be those of the car industry everywhere in the future. But to some extent Volvo are other problems. These plants would have contained some elements of Kalmar and we have been advised that production costs would have been between 3 and 4 per cent higher than by traditional methods. That may be an acceptable increase for someone building a small number of large cars, but it is serious for a mass producer of small cars like Fiat."

So why were Fiat prepared to carry such an additional burden? Signor Asnelli shrugged his shoulders. "One must accept circumstances", he

The circumstances to which he was referring have been spelled out by other Italian motor executives. They amount to this. At Kalmar the 400 Swedish workers-there will be 600 in a few months' time producing 30,000 cars a year—get working and rest facilities which, while they may not coincide with Neapolitan tastes, do at least break with the mind-bending, regimented frustration of keeping pace with a mechanical caterpillar.

The track at Kalmar is replaced by battery-driven plat-forms which carry the emerging car from one group of workers to another. This platform and its immense versatil-ity are the key to the whole by Volvo in 28 countries.

Other motor firms are believed to be negotiating licence agreements to build similar platforms. They can be control-

He adds: "In any event the platform gives manufacturers the ability to do something which is just not possible with a conveyor belt. You can change the entire assembly layout in a very short time and that saves real money. It gives manufacturers a degree of flex-ibility they never had before." In his forthright way he months after production began Kalmar is already outdated—a statement which spotlights the extent to which such pioneering ventures can become a costly

Mr Gyllenhammar insists: "Kalmar is not a showpiece. It is a workplace. We will not try to copy it in the future because we have learnt as we go along. We have already drawn from our experiences there."

ual demise for the way in which major projects are eval-uated, and decisions about their feasibility and desirability Conservative Government's commitment to Maplin followed from three steps, each of which in themselves were quite logical. The first was to accept that the answer to the question "is there likely to be a need for a third London airport in the 1980s?" was "yes". Although this answer had been arrived at by Mr Anthony Crosland in the last Lebour Govern-ment, no doubts were cast on its correctness by the Conservatives when they came into

The second step was respond to the results of the Roskill Commission, which completed its work in 1971, and to the reaction of public opinion. The Roskill Commission concluded that the airport should be sighted at Cublington, be-cause, after taking account of a host of considerations, not all of them strictly economic, this appeared to be the least costly.

Inevitably, people living near the proposed site were alarmed at the prospect. Public opinion at the prospect. Public opinion opposing it was hostile and strong. Moreover, according to Roskill, the differences between the sites were marginal in comparison with the total expenditure involved. This enconraged the Government finally to opt for the Foulness site. The third step was to decide that not only an airport, but a new town and seaport, should be part of the complex. It was at this point that the name was changed to Maplin and the whole nature of the project was enlarged. The hostile reception again became very strong, with many people in south Essex regarding it with a sense of outrage. Meanwhile, there had been a number of technical changes in aircraft design, as well as a more fundamental rethink about the merits of the idea, which were sufficient for the Labour Government, when re-turned to power in February, to call for a review. This is where the project stands now, in a state of limbo, but a strong possibility of eventual abandon-ment before it.

alternative sequence of questions should it have asked and what changes in decision-making machinery are implied?

The first mistake was to accept the "need" for a third airport rather uncritically. The analysis behind Mr Crosland's initial decision was frail and should have been reconsidered. More importantly, the question should not have been, "is there a need for a third airport? but "is there a better use for the resources that would have to be devoted to its construc-The basic framework of the analysis was crude. In the 1960s air traffic had been growing at a particular rate. It was assumed that this rate would continue into the 1970s and that forecasts could be made about the level of traffic in the early 1980s. With the runway capacity available at Heathrow and Gatwick in the late 1960s it was apparent that there would an acute shortage in about 15 years and that "congestion costs" would mount steadily. A third airport would be necess-

The first flaw here was the method of forecasting future levels of traffic. It was based on an extrapolation of past trends, without an explanation of why these trends had been found. In particular, the new concept of package-tour travel had caused a rapid growth rate of air travel in the 1960s and it is not clear that this will con-

But there were other misapprehensions. Although there might be a shortage of runway capacity by the 1980s it does not follow that a new airport has to be constructed. It might be cheaper and less risky to add more rupways to existing airports-an obvious possibility.

This point is made tellinely by Christopher Foster in his contribution to the IEA pam-phlet. He says that it was "nonsense" for the Conserva tive Government to pretend that a two-runway airport at Maplin would be less expensive than the addition of two runways at Heathrow.

The reason for this is that substantial reclamation costs would have to be incurred on

How did this happen? What Maplin and access facilities would have to be developed almost from nothing. The cost altogether would be at least £850m. By contrast, the cost of two extra runways at Heathrow would be £90m at the outside A further weakness of the original Crosland decision was that it assumed no alteration in the pricing policy of the British Airports Authority. In fact the policy has been changed since the Roskill Commission was given its terms of reference.

Planes using Heathrow and Gatwick at peak times-mainly in the summer-will now have to pay more than the average. The effect of this will be to deter planes from landing at these times and there should be some easing of the capacity

Right at the outset, therefore, the Conservative Government, taking its cue from its Labour predecessor, had made a mis-take. The basic assumption of the Roskill Commission—that a third airport must be built-had not been thought out properly.

There is some discussion of the need for another airport in the Commission's report. But it amounts to a series of empty and rather high sounding "obiter dicta" which have been characterized by Professor Mishan of London University as "froth". The disappointing aspect of this part of the report is that it is in marked courast with the high standards of logi-cal and careful analysis otherwise maintained throughout. Speculations about the contagious effect of a third airport on south-eastern regional growth may read well and sound exhibarating, but they cannot be and were not substantiated. Indeed, the narrowness of its terms of reference was the main weakness of the Roskill Commission's work. In part this was inherent in the nature of cost-benefit analysis. In part it erose because, as cost-benefit analysis, it was incomplete. Cost-benefit analysis is not intended to give an answer to an economic problem in the most ambitious and meaningful sense of providing an unambi-guous policy recommendation. In the last resort, decisions about public projects have to be taken by political authori-an inlaud site. But it again highlighted the difficulty of de-marcating cost calculations from political judgments. ties. The politicians' job is to weigh the interests of those who will lose against the interests of those who will gain. In Maplin's case there were

The third step, of expanding the Maplin concept, was a piece of bravurz which now seems two important value judgments involved. The first was that the numbers affected by siting the airport at Cublington would be considerably greater than those affected by siting it in south likely to cause the cancellation of the project. It crystallized opposition; it lacked any justi-fication in terms of social costs Essex. Although the majority of the community—at least, those and benefits; and it involved expenditures which seemed sizable even in relation to Cublington, what really mattered in the end was the claterous the Maplin mour of a large minority in the some fundamenta It would be easy to conclude from the Maplin episode that some fundamental reform of governmental machinery is required. Part of the problem was that decisions about "need" were formulated in government departments which did not have to worry over decisions. to worry over decisions about two crucial functions is not found either in private companies or in nationalized concerns like the British Airports Authority.

This might appear to justify returning as many decisions as possable to bodies which have to make commercial rather than political judgments. This is certainly the theme running through the IEA's pamphlet. But others might reasonably say that it is not political prosesses in the particular political processes in the particular p cesses, out the particular politicians responsible for the Maplin decision, which were at fault. At times they do seem to the strength of feeling against have lost a sense of proportion.

The Board is studying possible projects for the redevelopment of the site. Net earnings for 1973 reflect the above write-off. sort of response they can make.
There are really two points—that Dr Myrdal's conclusions must not be taken unreservedly and that the groundwork of assumptions they need must be excavated; and that their work has a diminishing relevance because of a concern with scientific exactitude rather than practical significance.

But to appeal to the academic community to alter the orientation of its interests is, in itself, to be guilty of bias. It is striking that Dr Myrdal recommends fur-ther research and study in those areas where he has made his own reputation. This is perfectly legitimate and proper, but is it not a case of "hidden bias"?

In its present form, the Rio Tinto-Zinc Corporation is one of the more interesting and intri-guing of the mining houses, but its antecedents in Spain are even more remarkable. Typical of the freebooting entrepre-neurs who developed the Rio Tinto mine during the eighteenth and nineteenth cen-turies was the redoubtable Lady

Maria Herbert, who gained pos-session of the mine after having failed in the attempt with her husband to buy the vacant Polish throne for £3m.

concentrate on examining how the wheel turned (or failed to turn) during the inter-war years and under the Bretton Woods system.

The principal conclusion of the first section, well substantiated by the records of the leading industrial countries, is that the inter-war years were not a period of competitive devaluations, as is so often assumed. With just two exceptions, major devaluations were followed by smaller, not larger, devaluations by other countries, if indeed there was any response at all.

In general, the orthodoxy of the period led to rigid exchange rates designed to enchange rates designed to en-hance the purchasing power of financial assets in the hands of the rentier classes. Such a policy could only have worked, say the authors, if there had been a rising source of world liquidity to feed the system—as there had been during the late nineteenth century thanks to the discovery of vast gold resources in South Africa.

Sources in South Arrica.

Such liquidity was to be found again during the first post-war decade, but this time the source was the American deficit, "aided and abetted by currencies deliberately under-valued by American action". Europe and Japan, say the authors benefited economically from this disequilibrium; American benefits were "geo-

At that time, the Bretton

Computer opportunity in Japan

By Kenneth Owen
Technology Correspondent
The British Overseas Trade Board is encouraging British manufacturers of computer peripheral equipment, and United Kingdom software houses, to move into the Japanese market. A report on the Japanese market, prepared for the board by Price Waterhouse & Co Japan, was published yesterday, and the board is organizing an exhibition next February at the British Export Marketing Centre in Tokyo which will include peripherals

In general, the report sees a significant market potential in Japan for British manufacturers. The opportunities will widen significantly from July 1, when the remaining restrictions on the import of technology and on manufacture under licence of computer-related equipment in Japan will be abolished. At present, United Kingdom exports of computers and peri-pherals to Japan are running at only about £10m a year. The report identifies four market sectors which are expected to grow by more than 50 per-cent a year. These are minicomputers, video displays, point-of-sale/data collectors, and key-to-disc input systems. ... Unlike the various hardware sectors, where the Japanese in-dustry itself is strong, the soft-ware market is believed to be much more open.

Charter Consolidated Limited

FINAL DIVIDEND AND CONSOLIDATED PROFIT STATEMENT FOR YEAR TO 31 MARCH 1974

The board of directors announces that it has today resolved to recommend to the annual general meeting of members to be held on 16 July 1974 a final dividend of 3.71371p per share in respect of the year ended 31 March 1974 (1973: 3.85p per share), payable to shareholders registered in the books year ended 31 March 1974 (1973: 3.85p per share), payable to shareholders registered in the books of the company at the close of business on 14 June 1974 and to persons presenting coupon No. 18 detached from share warrants to bearer. This dividend when added to the interim dividend of 2p per share paid on 4 January 1974 makes a total for the year of 5.71371p per share. The corresponding total for the previous year, if the imputation system had applied to the interim dividend paid on 3 April 1973, would have been 5.60p per share.

In terms of the imputation system of corporation tax in the United Kingdom this dividend is not subject to deduction of United Kingdom income tax by the company but will carry a tax credit representing thirty-three sixty-sevenths of the dividend, the amount for which the company will be accountable in respect of advance corporation tax.

The total dividend for the year, together with the associated tax credit of 2.68629p per share is 8.4p per share (1973: 8p per share), representing the maximum distribution which can be made under the counter-inflation legislation.

The following results of the company and its sebsidiaries for the year to 31 March 1974 are issued for information in advance of the annual report and accounts which will be posted to members on or about 20 June 1974.

NOTES

The taxation charge and the cost of dividends are not strictly comparable because of the introduction of the imputation system and the increase in the rate of corporation tax. There was a change in the basis of accounting in one of the company's industrial subsidiaries and in one of its associated companies. The effect on earnings attributable to Charter in the year ending 31st March, 1974 represents an increase of approximately 5970,000 compared with last year.

Salient points from the Statement by the Chairman, Mr. J. D. Oakley: The year ended 31 December 1973 was another year of progress for the Company including a first-time profit contribution of £115,758 from Peter Pan Playthings Limited acquired in November last year. Having now had a few months' experience with the Company we have been confirmed in our view that this will be a successful acquisition and plans for considerable growth are in hand.

Increased sales were due to a number of factors, the principal one being the introduction of Model Toys Limited into the field of girls' toys which has created a new major area of expansion. The Group continues to add to its product range and has found it necessary to plan for an increase in its warehousing and production facilities.

Production was maintained close to last year's level during the period of the three-day week. With the resumption of the five-day week all our companies made a quick return to normal production. Supplies of raw materials remain difficult but all these problems are being dealt with in an energetic manner.

It is extremely difficult in the present circumstances to give any prediction of the outcome for 1974. However, we have emerged from the initial difficulties of the year better than might have been feared. production has recovered very quickly and the Order Book is strong.

Dividend hopes spur equities

The recovery in share prices gathered strength yesterday after a newspaper report that the Government is considering ending dividend restraint when Phase Three expires this aurumn. Meanwhile with Wall Street still moving up after prime rate cuts from United States banks, London's confidence in the outlook for interest rates was further displayed by Stock Exchange turnover figures for May. These showed a substantial increase in trading in short-dated government bonds, which would be the first to bene-fit from lower United Kingdom interest rates.

A general rise in industrial equities put 5.6 on the FT index (285.9), and 1.96 on the wider based The Times index, which closed at 113.37. Most of the rise represented marking up operations by the jobbers before the marker opened But prices held market opened. GRE stays cautious but profits should gro

Confirming the mixed outlook expressed in his farewell annual statement a mouth ago, Li-Col C. P. In the United Kingdom, fire results continue to be satisfac-tory, and motor results are in a break-even position. It would, however, be necessary to seek approval from the Department of Trade for an increase in motor rates before the end of the year. In other sectors, the home acci-

Brooke Bond now aims towards £18.5m peak

Given a clear run in to the adjustment, the increase was post, the board of Brooke Bond 16.8 per cent. Liebig has revised its profits record before tax of £18.5m for the year to June 30. This com-pares with the interim report which merely said that profits would exceed the £16.6m achieved a year ago. The present forecast is contained in a letter to shareholders concerning the agreed £10.9m bid for Baxters (Butchers).

(Butchers).

Like many companies recently, the Brooke Bond board is pleased with its overseas investments, which in this case are going to account for most of the £1.9m increase forecast in profits. At half time, group profits were ahead from £6.4m to £7.9m, and the board companied that at home margins no E7.9m, and the board com-mented that at home margins were lower but higher sales had held trading profits steady. Overseas profits had gone ahead, while United Kingdom profits as a whole were up mainly because of lower interest costs.

Woolworth looks to good year

Speaking in New York yester-day, Mr Lester Burcham, chair-man of F. W. Woolworth & Co. forecast a "great improvement" in profits performance for the rest of 1974. He gave no specific projections, but said: "On the projections, but said: On the basis of the best trading the company can obtain of the business conditions that will pre-vail between now and the end of January—the end of the fin-ancial year—we are reasonably certain that the full year will be a successful one."

a successful one."

The first quarter performance—when profits fell from 8870m to $758m—should not be considered a basis for projecting the total year profits. He is also very bullish about Woolworth's Profits subsidiary and sees no British subsidiary, and sees no material effect from the limit-ing of profit margins.

Gerrard & National From the Annual Report & Statement of the Chairman, Mr. K. H. Whitaker

- The profit for the year amounted to £1,180,431 after providing for taxation and a transfer to inner reserves. It has not been necessary to make any further provision for depreciation out of inner reserves this year, which, as a result, stand appreciably higher than last year.
- The directors recommend a final dividend of 34.2705% making a total distribution of 44.7705% which is equivalent to 66.15% compared with 63% last year. This is the maximum amount allowed under Stage 3 of the Government's Counter Inflation Programme.
- After this payment the unappropriated profit carried forward is increased from £1,810,835 to £2,145,658.
- The past financial year was undoubtedly one of the most difficult in the history of the discount market for reasons which have received wide publicity. In July minimum lending rate rose from 73% to 1113% and reached a high of 13% in November. During this period we continued our policy of active dealing in short-dated assets and our daily turnover has been exceptionally high. Although we carry a comparatively large book its life continues to be very short.
- In the present inflationary atmosphere and the uncertainty as to the future course of interest rates we shall continue to be extremely cautious.
- I mentioned in my statement last year that a newly constituted board had been appointed. The confidence that I then expressed in the management has proved to have been justified, and as I shall reach the age of 63 in August next it is my present intention to retire from the board in the coming year.
